Nixon Plans Address To Congress Thursday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced today President Nixon will address a joint session of Congress at 12:30 p.m. EDT Thursday on his new economic policies.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler's announcement at the White House came after congressional leaders had made the disclosure on Capitol Hill that Nixon would address Congress.

Nixon met for a little over two hours today with his Cabinet Council on International Economic Policy, with the main focus on U.S. competition in world markets.

Ziegler said there was a good deal of discussion on the necessity for establishing new plants and equipment so that U.S. industry can be more competitive in international trade.

Ziegler said the discussion also included the international monetary situation and trade matters, including the meeting this week in Washington of U.S. and Japanese Cabinet members on economic relations.

Following the President's address, the House and Senate will remain in the House chamber for a reception for the three Apollo 15 astronauts.

The congressional leaders made their report while Nixon met with top advisers on international economic policy. A high-level Japanese delegation is due in town later in the week to discuss trade problems.

No agenda was announced for the meeting, but there was speculation the discussions would center on the upcoming talks.

Among those scheduled to attend today's meeting were Treasury Secretary John B. Connally; Secretary of State William P. Rogers; Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird; Director George Shultz of the Office of Management and Budget; Chairman Paul McCracken of the President's Council of Economic Advisers; Ambassador Carl J. Gilbert, Nixon's special trade representative; and Ambassador-at-Large David M. Kennedy, former secretary of the Treasury.

Connally and Rogers will be the leading U.S. participants in discussions Thursday and Friday marking the annual U.S.Japanese meeting of cabinet ministers on trade and economic affairs.

The Japanese ministers are expected to push for repeal of restrictions on the sale of Japanese products in the United States, including a 10-per-cent surtax on imports imposed Aug. 15 by President Nixon as part of a sweeping new policy designed to curb inflation and protect the dollar.

In his Labor Day message Monday, broadcast nationwide on radio, Nixon praised the American competitive spirit and urged work toward "a goal we have rarely been able to achieve in the past 40 years—a new prosperity without war and without inflation."

In another development, AFL-CIO President George Meany said he would agree to a no-strike pledge if labor is given a voice in deciding what follows the wage-price freeze.

Airliner In Small Pieces

Fifty-Six Bodies Found

"We've got a lot of rain, low clouds and wind, and those people on the hill are taking a beating," an official said of rescuers who were to continue today to remove the bodies of 111 victims from the mountain.

"We've got that airplane scattered up and down a hillside for about 1,500 feet," added the official, Patrick Wellington, deputy commissioner of the Alaska Public Safety Department.

By late Monday rescuers had recovered 56 bodies and the flight recorders from the scene where the Alaska Airlines 727 jet crashed Saturday in the nation's worst single-aircraft disaster.

The bodies and debris were scattered throughout three parallel depressions 2,500 feet up 3,500-foot Mt. Chilkat.

As the bodies labeled with marking pencils for identification and airlifted by helicopter to Juneau, where a temporary morgue has been set up in a National Guard armory.

Recovery workers moved through fist-sized chunks of metal, paper and clothing searching for the remains of victims Monday as three private helicopters and one Coast Guard craft moved over the area, ferrying supplies to the rescue party.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators began charting the location of every piece of debris in an attempt to determine the chain of events before and during the crash.

The two recorders found Monday were to be flown to Seattle today. The voice recorder will be read there. The flight recorder will be forwarded to a laboratory in Washington, D.C.

Officials still could give no indication as to what caused the crash.

The airliner was en route from Yakutu and was on its final approach to Juneau Municipal Airport when it hit the ridge about 1,000 feet below the top of the mountain.

Federal Aviation Administration regulations require incoming planes to maintain at least a 6,500-foot altitude at that point.

Festival Brawl

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A rock festival erupted Monday night into a brawl among motorcyclists, Mexican-American youths and surfers fighting with knives, chains, clubs and bottles. One cyclist was killed and several other persons were injured.

The outbreak lasted for more than an hour before being broken up by state highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and police who sealed off the area where 3,000 youths had been listening to the all-day rock concert Monday.

About 150 persons were rounded up by officers for questioning, but none was immediately booked, authorities said.

Most of the injured were taken to Watsonville Community Hospital, about six miles south of the festival's site in a pasture near a lake. Hospital spokesmen said a motorcyclist identified as Peter Michael Montera, 26, Long Beach, Calif., died of stab wounds. Two other motorcyclists, Bruce Miller, 31, Long Beach, and Jasper Turco, 24, San Jose, Calif., were reported in good condition after surgery.

Authorities said the trouble occurred just as the festival was breaking up.

Witnesses said 19 members of a motorcycle club from San Jose arrived at the previously calm festival and clashed with a group of Mexican-American youths. And the fight was joined by surfers from beaches near Watsonville, about 75 miles south of San Francisco.

It was the second straight day that motorcyclists were involved in violence in California. On Sunday a motorcyclist and a tavern keeper were wounded in a shootout in the seaside resort town of Jenner, 60 miles north of San Francisco, after an argument over service.

Jenner was guarded by police and highway patrolmen Monday after a purported spokesman for some 200 motorcyclist vowed to "tear up this town" in retaliation for the shooting.

The cyclists involved in the Watsonville brawl were of a different gang than the one in Jenner, authorities said.

Vandals Set Tree House Afire

Vandalism was the apparent cause of a tree house fire Sunday night, reports Fire Chief Dolph Webb.

Webb said firemen were called to 1027 North Kingshighway at 11 p.m. Sunday when Bernare Rice reproted the fire. The tree house, at the rear of the Rice home was destroyed.

A second fire report at 3:40 p.m. Monday sent firemen to 310 Marion to extinguish a small shrubbery fire at the Jim Smith home. Webb said apparently windblown burning trash had spread to the shrubbery and a small tree.

Damico Refuses Detector Test

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — A 25year-old St. Louis County man remained in custody today following identification of a woman's body found in a wooded area as that of a suburban St. Louis housewife missing since Aug. 16.

County authorities said Anthony P. Damico has refused through his attorney to take a lie detector test in the death of Mrs. Lawrence Lucas, 36.

The decomposed body of the attractive woman was identified Monday by Dr. George E. Gantner, county medical examiner, from dental records.

Gantner said Mrs. Lucas died from a heavy blow to the head administered by a blunt instrument. She suffered a fractured skull and broken jaw.

The body was accidentally discovered Sunday night in an area near Babler State Park in west St. Louis County.

The highway patrol and county authorities maintained a vigil over the body until daybreak Monday, then sifted through weeds and dirt in the vicinity for evidence.

Damico, who served 13 months of a three-year sentence for armed robbery in 1966, was charged with interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle after he was found sleeping in Mrs. Lucas' car near Panama City Beach, Fla., Aug. 27.

He told authorities he had accompanied Mrs. Lucas, the mother of daughters 12 and 16, to Memphis, Tenn., with three other men, then left the group for Florida.

Damico was also charged with fraudulent use of Mrs. Lucas' credit card for purchase of a radio at St. Charles, Mo., the afternoon of her disappearance.

Mrs. Lucas had not been seen since a shopping excursion. She had failed to keep an appointment to meet her younger daughter at a riding stable near where her body was found.

MEMO TO 18-YEAR OLDS:
HONOR THE VOTE

Now that the 18-year-olds have the Constitutional right to vote, some political forces are making a concerted effort to channel the young people's thinking in one direction — left-liberal. And many persons believe that may be fairly easy to do, because it is felt that voters of such a tender age will naturally be idealistic, desirous of change, unafraid and therefore not backward-looking but facing into the future with hope and great sincerity.

That is a description of millions of young persons, but it does not mean that they will pitch headlong into the unknown politics. The liberal- radicals who believe that the votes of the 18-, 19- and 20-year olds are all sewed up may be in for a big surprise. Children take many of their habits and customs from their parents, despite the supposed enormous generation gap of our day.

A few years ago the 18-year-olds received the vote in Scotland, and, to everyone's surprise, more conservatives than ever were elected to public office. With the 18-year-olds voting in the general British elections in June of 1970, the Conservatives were returned to power over the Laborites, who had ruled for six years. So the political gap between the generations may be over-estimated. There is no reason to believe that Americans youths will opt for chaos, which may be the alternative to measured change. We ask them to honor the vote with their best thinking.

COFFEE BREAKS

Coffee breaks could well be the straw that breaks the camel's back as far as the economic well being of a small firm is concerned.

Management experts have come up with some interesting figures on the matter of coffee slurping. Based on the minimum federal wage of only $1.60 an hour, the experts found that if a firm has 10 employes and they each lose five minutes a day, the cost is $680 a year.

Fifteen minutes lost a day costs the same firm more than $2,000 a year for work not done.

If the average salary figures out at $2.75 an hour, 15 minutes lost a day from 10 employes costs more than $3,500 a year.

The present economic instability of the U.S. indicated the time has come for employer and employe aloke to provide a day's work for a day's pay and with quality production included.

PEACEFUL ATOM

The growth of nuclear power is a worldwide, not just an American, phenomenon. There are more than 80 operating nuclear plants in the world, only 22 of them in the United States. Authorities predict there will be more than 250 operating nuclear plants throughout the world by the end of the decade. And that's just the beginning. Unless technology comes up with an alternative, it appears that atomic energy will become the world's primary source of power.

The implications of this growth add importance to the fourth meeting on nuclear power sponsored by the United Nations' International Atomic Energy Agency. The 10-day meeting beginning on Monday, Sept. 6 in Geneva will explore such topics as the world energy demand by the year 2000, nuclear plant operating methods, health and safety -- plus a host of related issues. It can be predicted in advance that not all the scientists will agree that nuclear power is perfectly healthy and completely safe.

According to critics, nuclear power plants heat up waterways, emit radiation and have the potential -- through a freak accident -- of causing death and destruction. Proponents reply that, at least in the United States, there has never been a loss of life or property damage in 14 years of operating experience. What radiation escapes from nuclear reactors is only a tiny fraction of the radiation we constantly receive from the sun, the earth and food. Nuclear plants, they add, are equipped with backup safety features and failsafe systems which shut a reactor down at the first hint of trouble.

This is an over-simplification of the atomic debate. In Geneva, the scientists will argue about millirems of radiation exposure, esoteric design critera, complicated statistical computations and probably mathematics. In this rarified atmosphere, the general public -- which has the most to gain and lose from nuclear power -- finds itself in the hands of its scientists. It doesn't help matters when the scientists disagree as they so frequently do about the pros and cons of nuclear power.

THE POLITICAL PLAGUE

After listening to the Ralph Naders and others of his ilk belabor the business and industrial leadership of America and their products, we read with interest what Dr. George P. Loweke had to say in his book, "The Political Plague of America."

Dr. Loweke comments: "We aim to cultivate great men, but not in the field of economic independence. We are bringing up a nation of dependents. Everyone today must always be subordinated to the placemen. Knowledge is power, but this is true only in the exercise of knowledge. The exploitation of knowledge from those who have it, under the power of those who do not have it, can only be done to a degree and then under oppressive conditions. This is another one of the factors that is stalling progress in the country."

Dr. Loweke believes that people are not doing their best any more under the present specious freedom system of this country, which formerly provided a minimum of restrictions. The greatness of men than came out, each in his own way. The country in turn benefitted from the exercise of the rarest wisdom of these men, which is not now used to the fullest, because these organizational geniuses are not given a free-hand to operate, lest it be to their own advantage. The dominant powers are all in government, exercised by politicians who are not creators for the general good. Business genius is thwarted and the nation is handicapped. Under stable conditions in the world such an experiment might not be so disastrous. There are times a nation could founder under reckless administration and not be irreparably weakened.

This is exactly the risk that has been taken by recent administrations in Washington, who became reckless with the unchallenged leadership of America in world affairs. American leadership was taken for granted. But the advancing state of world science brought about a change unsuspected by politicians.

Without the scientific advance of Russia our position would still not be threatened despite the error of our ways. Under our present degree of socialism this country might still not have its leadership challenged in the world. The embarrassment of having run a tie race for first place internationally, as a result of scientific advancement, is a twist thoughtless statesmen never considered. The country is now confronted with the challenge of regaining our national stature by reexcelling in science ... and by industrial invention and modernized production.

Dr. Loweke says that politicians will never again allow, if they can prevent it, science and technology to attain unbridled status of these domains held formerly under the reign of capitalism. Almost without exception some lesser qualified bureaucrat, than the scientists working under him, heads every research project, even in industry. Scientists cannot do their best work this way.

Everyone likes to feel he is boss of his destiny, not just the bureaucratic administrators. But some men wish to earn it in their own right, without obligation to demagogues. Such individuals are more worthy than those appointed and annointed persons by our ruling politicians.

Under the free market place and private enterprise this is possible, under bureaucracy this privilege to make oneself what one wishes is denied. It becomes rather a matter of making of oneself what others wish.

WELFARE MONSTROSITY

There can be no more convincing evidence of the need for drastic curbs of the nation's rapidly growing welfare system than a look at the record of the last 10 years.

Since 1961 the number of persons on relief in the United States has doubled — from 7.2 million to about 14.4 million. The burden on taxpayers has quadrupled — with costs shooting up from 4.3 billion a year to nearly $17 billion.

Nor does the end appear in sight if the present trend continues unchecked. In a comprehensive analysis of spiraling welfare programs by U.S. News & World Report, it is estimated that costs could climb another $4 billion by next year.

Hardest hit by the welfare "bonanza" have been the most populous states with dense urban areas. In New York, for example, the public assistance budget has skyrocketed more than 900 per cent voer the last decade — from almost $354 million in 1961 to more than $3.5 billion this year!

California welfare rolls have grown nearly 470 per cent in that period, with taxpayers now shelling out more than $2.8 billion annually compared to about $496 million 10 years ago. Pennsylvania now budgets more than $1 billion a year for reliefers, an increase of 450 per cent over the 1961 figure of about $189 million.

Illinois is not far behind, with annual welfare costs of around $1 billion, up about 320 per cent over the $236 million spent just 10 years ago. Massachusetts, the tenth - largest state in terms of population, puts out nearly $828 million for welfare every year, a whopping 430 per cent jump above the $156 million budgeted in 1961.

These are only the most extreme examples. Public assistance costs are up substantially in virtually every section of the United States. Even sparsely populated Alaska and Wyoming showed marked increases in welfare spending during the 1961-71 period.

Although the heaviest burden is in the nation's cities — where in some cases about one of every seven residents is on relief — taxpayers throughout the land are beginning to bend under the load. And beginning to protest.

They are tired of the widespread abuses of programs designed basically to help those genuinely in need, are weary of supporting those who can trace their welfare dependency back several generations.

They are fed up with the cheaters who, by fraudulent practices, dupe the government out of tax money sorely needed for other purposes.

There are firm indications government officials finally are getting the message. Long - overdue reforms are being initiated to rein in the galloping costs of public welfare.

Legislation is pending in Congress to overhaul the nation's out -of -whack welfare machinery, but a more encouraging sign is that a growing number of state administrations seem determined to do something about controlling their runaway welfare systems.

Illinois Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, citing an unexpected growth in welfare rolls, recently announced payments would be cut if the state ran out of funds already budgeted for welfare benefits. Ogilvie also is pushing for tightened work requirements for welfare recipients.

He has endorsed a one - year residency requirement for obtaining public aid, passed in the last session of the General Assembly. Other states where one - year residency bills are pending include Ohio, Michigan and wisconsin.

California Gov. Ronald Reagan has adopted a "get - tough" attitude toward welfare, calling for reform measures to set rigid ceilings on spending and stricter work standards.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller got major legislative changes to reduce the welfare load, including a requirement that employable welfare recipients go to work or lose their benefits. A one - year residencyrule also was enacted, with enforcement being held up by a court challenge.

Millions of Americans are in genuine need. They deserve public assistance, but the professional loafers and the cheaters who have been riding the welfare boom must be weeded out if the system is to work as intended. The alternative is economic disaster.

PRE-BUILT HOUSING PLANNED IN VIRGINIA

Factory - finished modules for town houses and garden - type apartments will roll off the assembly lines of the Urban Systems Development Corporation plant in Fredericksburg, Va., by the end of the year.

The plant is expected to produce 700 dwelling units next year, with the maximum output of 1,400 at the 68,000- square - foot facility by 1973.

USDC's goal, according to President Rex Garrett, "will be to produce housing as good as or better than conventionally built homes and at lower cost. In appearance, the modular home will look exactly like a conventionally built unit."

* * * The farmer's son returned from his first trip to the big city and informed his father he was going to plant his 40 acres of land in hair.

"Hair?" exclaimed the father. "What on earth for?"

"Well," said Junior. "I met a girl at the company store and she told me she made $10,000 off a patch of hair no bigger than the palm of my hand!"

BILLIONS DOWN THE DRAIN

It has been said down through the years that you can't buy friendship. The United States is learning the truth of the old saying through its give- away economic aid plan to other nations. The government put charity with tax dollars- yours and mine -- on a formidable basis at the conslusion of World War II with the ostensible purpose of rehabilitation of the world ecomony and the prevention of a take - over of the recipient nations by communism. Here is the official record of what has happened in some cases:

France -- $9.5 billion in economic, arms aid. France pulled out of NATO.

India -- $8.7 billion in economic aid. India has signed a friendship treaty with Russia.

Chile -- $1.6 billion in economic aid. Chile is now Marxist, chasing out U.S. companies.

Our global position at the end of the war was powerful, extensive and should have offered world leadership by true statesmen. But instead of relying on the tested and success -producing formula of diplomacy, we went into the handout business which neither gained us friends nor prevented the spread of the worst kind of plague in history,communism We are now fighting for our economic lives, the fight being in part due to intolerable foreign trade imbalance which has seen our imports exceed our exports. Our tax dollars, given away as foreign aid, have launched powerful economic forces abroad which are out-producing and outselling us. Our give - away of billions did not hold together the alliances on which we counted for defesive shields. Now we are paying a heavy price.

Tracking the Subversives: Bombs still Blowing Holes in Nations FBI Digs Into SDS Underground

by Victor Riesel

WASHINGTON: There are those in considerably influential circles who would have the nation believe that supporting the Subversive activities Control Board is akin to bottling the bubonic plague and hawking it as political patent medicine. This is unfortunate. There are thousands of explosive reasons for the continued financing of the Board, for its staffing and for giving its hearings a fair hearing.

There is, for example, the lethal matter of bombings brought to mind by the Aug. 31 (1971) indictment of four men on charges of murdering one Robety Fassnacht. He was blown to bits Aug. 24, 1970, just about a year ago, while in the pursuit of knowledge in the U.S. Army Mathematics Research Center, U. Of Wisconsin in Madison. The four men, charged inabsentia, are being tracked by the FBI.

It is tragic that the late physicist Fassnacht, and four others badly hurt when he was killed, should become statistics. It also is tragic that the dead- liness at Kent State U. should become a cause celebre and scholar Fassnacht should be almost completely forgotten. For the moment the statistics are the thing.

As the universities' lights go on all over the nation these days, authorities in Washington report that since January 1969 more than 51 federal buildings have been bombed. The General Services Administration probably has a bigger figure. In all there have been well over 6,500 bombings since the count began three Januarys ago. At least 55 persons have been killed, including of course, the apolitical mathematician Fassnacht. Mixed with this blood is money, if it's of consequence. Lots of money in damages--well over $30 million.

When last I talked with representatives of the California Bankers Assn., for example, I was told that the Bank of America has been "targeted." It had been hit at least 30 times by early summer. In one two-week period it was hit 10 times.

The cost then was $1.5 million – and the computer specialists were estimating this to hike to $3.5 million.

And from January 1969, bombs have hit many a corporate building, oil refineries, communication towers, a telephone exchange, power poles, rail tracks, police transmitters, stationhouses and vehicles.

At one point the authorities were able to place definitive responsibility for 36 per cent of the bombings. The other 64 per cent are still to be solved. But the scientific analyses are grimly fascinating-- especially should they be to the Congressmen who, for reasons they really never explained fully fought the Subversive Activities Control Board as though it were chaired by Emperor Caligual.

Of the bombings definitely traced by the Treasury Dept. for the period January 1969 to April 15, 1970: some 56 percent were attributed to campus disorders (such as the one in which theorist Fassnacht was killed later); 19 per cent were set by black extremists; 14 per cent by white extremists: 2 per cent in labor disputes; 1 per cent to attacks on religious institiuons; and 8 per cent "in aid of criminal activites (re.Extortion, theft, arson for insurance)."

The mob's the mob and it is being electronically pursued. But what of the black and white extremists? What of the revolutionary units? What of the weird, independent "armies", liberation fronts, and violent, secret societies? If these aren't lethally subversive, if the bombing of oil refineries, the derailment of trains, the infiltration of hugh factories by cells which dispatch "delegations" to Hanoi, the targeting of banks to disrupt the credit system and the brutal political executions of policemen are are not subversive-- what is?

And what of the 16 missing SDS Weatherman (and women)? What of the types such as Kathy Boudin and Cathy Wilkerson, the young women, their clothes blasted off, in their own New York City bomb factory, who dashed into the streets nude, and escaped? What of other bomb factories? What of the Weathermen Bureau leaders such as Mark Rudd whose storm trooper squads first seized parts of Columbia University some years ago (during which one police officer was injured and paralyzed)?

What of the bands who were indicted on charges of disrupting parts of Chicago and Detroit and now are fugitives from the FBI which wants them for violation of the Federal laws on conspiracy, Federal bomb and gun-control laws, as well as the anti-rioting andmob action statutes?

Where is the self-avowed terrorist Bernardine Dohrn, who was active in and around Kent State U. as well as other storm centers? She has admitted being part of the national home - bomb factory complex.

Certainly there are subversives? If the Bernardine Dohrns, the Mark Rudds, the Armstrong brothers (of theFassnacht murder charges) are not subversive, then let's throw away the word. Let those who mock the board stand and mock the widows of those killed, and the families of those maimed, and the millions on millions of undergraduates who simply want basic learning, not bombs.

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON-- For protection against dishonest businessmen, consumers still rely upon the 142 local Better Business Bureaus more than any other source. Yet these prestigious agencies often put out misinformation intended more to protect the companies than their customers.

This is the startling conclusion of Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., after an intensive, three-month study. He assigned several young sleuths to investigate BBBs across the country. Their findings are summed up in an 88-page report, still indraft form.

Here are excerpts from a bootleg copy:

"Checking with BBB is useless and possibly has a negative effect for the consumer, " charges the Rosenthal report, "because their information is inaccurate and favors member companies."

BBBs are self-protection devices for business, whose shady and shoddy dealings are often concealed from the public, the report also alleges. "One must not lose sight that BBB efforts on behalf of the consumer exist to forestall government activity." Many of the "successes" that the BBBs have chalked up, says the report, are really refusals of stores to make adjustments .

The report claims that BBBs have chalked up, says the report, are really refusals of stores to make adjustments.

The report claims that BBBs give "fraudulent businesses an aura of respectability-....Even wholly illegitimate firms" can fool the BBBs. Rosenthal's investigation "indicated that firms, even though adjudicated frauds....have continued their BBB membership." Many BBBs in the survey hadn't expelled a member in more than a year, others had expelled only one.

UNDERCOVER CUSTOMERS

The Congressman's sleuths, as one technique, posed as customers and asked the BBBs about firms that had been subjects of government action.

A number of Holiday Health Spas, for instance, were accused by the Federal Trade Commission of falsely advertising they could add years to the life span of members, prevent heart attacks and produce other health miracles. The parent organization signed a "consent" order agreeing to abide by the law.

Yet Rosenthal's gumshoes were told by BBBs merely that the Holiday Spas "always adjusted" problems. No mention was made of the FTC action.

Several Arthur Murray Dance studios were accused by the FTC of conducting a land-office business in phony contracts. In one case cited by the FTC, a 62-year-old woman was pushed into signing an $8,200 contract while she still had 300 hours of dance instruction coming. Although these cases chiefly involved previous studio owners, complaints are still coming in.

The BBBs told the congressional undercover customers absolutely nothing of this sordid history, saying only that they had received "no complaints for the last three years."

We have confirmed Rosenthal's findings independently in the Washington area. We inquired about AAMCO Automatic Transmissions. The FTC has brought formal charges against the company for scandalously bilking the public. Yet the Washington Better Business Bureau claimed to have no knowledge of any government action against AAMCO and told us encouragingly: "I don't think you'll have any trouble."

The Better Business Bureau in each community is supported by local businesses. This would seem to constitute an insurmountable conflict of interest.

PROTECTING SHADY FIRMS

The Rosentahl report tells of a dedicated BBB worker who got excellent results for consumers by threatening shady firms with lawsuits. But the companies complained, and he had to back off. His "success rate" has now dropped from 75 to 25 per cent.

Another BBB official reported some dishonest dealing to the FTC. "At the next BBB board of directors meeting," declares the report, "the representative of that company (a big contributor to BBB) stood up and suggested that industry should keep its squabbles out of the public sphere." The BBB official backed down The report cites still another member company who "was convicted of all counts of a multi-count indictment" for holding furniture hostage and committing other criminal offenses. No mention was made of this to Rosenthal's man. But when he asked about a nonmember company, the BBB confided that the company had been under investigation "by the district attorney."

Rosenthal's investigators also talked with ten buyers whose complaints according to the BBBs , had been completely resolved. Seven said they had not been helped at all.

Rosenthal also canvassed 31 consumer organizations by mail, asking their opinion of the Better Business Bureaus. Three sent in praise, three replies were vague. The remaining 25 responses claimed, in varying degrees, that the BBBs were hopeless.

The Council, which represents all 142 BBBs, told us their internal checks had turned up "reporting deficiencies" similar to those described by Rosenthal. John O'Brien, the council's vice president, said that a new management team is running the organization now, "and it's an entirely new ball game." He said a multi-million dollar program has been initiated to upgrade the BBBs, and almost $500,000 ingrants already have been made to beef up BBB service to consumers.

Footnote: The Rosethal report charges that the BBBs, although they represent commercial firms, are able to get free radio—TV time the same as the Red Cross of American Cancer Society. At least one Better Business Bureau is drawing federal aid. The report concedes that "BBB provides some good information on the fly-by - night operator', but not enough to justify free air time.

Reunification Termed Only Way To Lasting Peace In N. Ireland

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic declared after a meeting with Prime Minister Edward Heath today that reunification of Ireland is the only way to bring permanent peace in Northern Ireland.

Heath and Lynch conferred for two days on ways of finding a solution to the two years of civil strife in Ulster, Northern Ireland's official name.

Lynch described his talks with Heath—who has the overall say in running the British province—as "merely an examination in depth of the situation."

No firm decisions were reached.

The meeting between the two leaders came with no real letup in the rioting, shooting and bombing in Ulster that has claimed 100 lives-including children and British soldiers.

Lynch has come under fire of the outlawed Irish Republican Army—IRA—which is dedicated to unification of Ireland by any means, including force.

The Irish leader, regarded as a moderate, goes along with the unification tradition that dates 50 years in IRA history but wants to achieve unity by peaceful means.

Lynch's comment that reunification is the only way to bring a lasting solution of the Irish question means that steps must be taken now to give the Roman Catholics more say in government in the north.

The soft-spoken leader of the Irish Republic said he would meet with Heath again. They have another date in October.

From the beginning there was no hope of any firm decisions with the absence of the Northern Ireland's prime minister, Brian Faulkner.

Health's next move is obviously to confer with Faulkner on what steps the London government will take.

The talks raised a cautious air of optimism in London. The summit was not expected to lead to any dramatic moves to settle the conflict in Northern Ireland, but could create an atmosphere for more moderation.

The first session was described by officials as "relaxed, friendly and businesslike."

As the two leaders adjourned their talks for the night, word came that Northern Ireland's two-year death toll climbed to 100 with the shooting of 14-yearold Annette McGavigan in Londonderry's Roman Catholic Bogside quarter.

Annette was licking a lollipop and talking with friends as they sat on a garden wall when a gun battle blazed between British troops and hidden gunmen. Annette was struck in the head by a bullet. She was given last rites by a Catholic priest as her friends wailed in terror.

The British army said its troops shot back only at individual snipers and no one else was in the line of fire during the exchange. But a spokesman did not discount the possibility that a ricocheting military bullet may have hit the girl.

After the shooting, crowds gathered and hurled petrol bombs and stones at troops. One soldier was wounded but the district later was reported quiet.

As Lynch arrived at the Irish Embassy here to spend the night, fighting erupted between police and demonstrators. Police helmets fell to the ground during fist fights as demonstrators charged Lynch's car, shouting "No sellout, Jack. No sellout." There were countercries of "Fascist" as Lynch backed into his car until police fought off the crowd.

Scotland Yard said nine policemen were injured and three demonstrators were arrested. A spokesman for one group picketing the embassy said they were protesting Northern Ireland's internment without trial of more than 200 alleged Irish Republic Army —IRA— activists.

Puerto Rican Leftists Plot Anti-American Demonstration

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — Puerto Rico's leftist separatists are agitating for a massive anti-American demonstration to coincide with the opening of the national governors' conference in San Juan next Sunday.

The activists are predicting a turnout of 15,000 at a rally and protest march and are counting on hundreds of journalists from the mainland to report back the demonstrators' allegations of c lonialism and exploitation by the United States.

"They will seek to have our police overreact," said one island leader. "They all remember what happened to Chicago's image during the Democratic convention" in 1968.

Rumors that 100 U.S.-owned businesses will be sabotaged during the four-day conference have shaken the business community and various business groups have held secret talks to work out precautions.

All police and fire department leaves have been canceled during the conference.

Although indpendence seekers are believed to number less than 100,000 out of a total island population of 2.7 million, their militant zeal belies their small number. In the last election, separatists failed to poll 3 per cent of the vote, although some separatists groups boycott elections as a matter of policy.

A leaflet handed out by the organizers of the "National Day of Protest" on Sunday says: "There will be newsmen from around the world at the conference and they will carry our protest to all countries."

Authorities say there will be room for reasonable picketing, but they are bracing themselves for intense provocations.

One U.S.-owned plant is closing all but two entrances to its sprawling premises and will allow only personnel with special identification cards to enter the building. Messengers, delivery men and others will have to remain outside.

One businessman said that "although rumors to the effect that 100 industries will be bombed sounds grotesque, we are doing all in our power to safeguard probable targets."

Sporadically over the past months, terrorists belonging to outlawed "Independentists"—separatist—gangs have firebombed stores owned by Americans and Cubans or with American-sounding names.

The association's headquarters in Columbia said about 400 bank personnel and their spouses from 26 counties in southwest Missouri were expected for the Springfield meeting.

Other meetings were scheduled Wednesday at Poplar Bluff; Thursday at Normany in St. Louis County; Sept. 20 at Kirksville; Sept. 21 at Chillicothe; Sept. 22 at St. Joseph and Sept. 23 at Kansas City.

Congress To Find Agenda Revised On Return To Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returns this week after a month's vacation to find its agenda rewritten by President Nixon—his "new American revolution" replaced by his new economic policy.

When the congressional recess began Aug. 6, Nixon was pushing welfare reform and revenue sharing as the centerpieces of the program he outlined in his State of the Union message last January.

But the President, faced with a steadily worsening economy, shifted gears Aug. 15. He called for passage of a tax package, froze wages, prices and rents for 90 days and took action to stabilize the dollar.

And he asked Congress to delay the effective dates of his welfare-reform and revenuesharing plans to hold down federal spending and allow prompt consideration of his economic program.

Cambodian Terrorists Fail In Bid To Kill U.S. Ambassador

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Terrorists made an unsuccessful bid to kill the U.S. Ambassador to Cambodia, Emory C. Swank, by pushing a bomb- laden bicycle out of an alleyway as he sped past in his car on his way to work, embassy officials reported today.

Swank was unharmed and an embassy spokesman said the ambassador was not aware until several hours after the incident that an assassination attempt had been made.

The riderless bicycle bumped gently against Swank's car as it rolled out into the roadway, the official said.

A Cambodian security gurad, Sgt. Yim Sarun, accompanied the ambassador on the half-mile journey from his residence and later sent police back to investigage the bicycle, which was found to have a plastic explosive charge attached to the handlebars, the spokesman said.

He added that the incident occurred around 7:30 a.m. but that the ambassador was not informed of the assassination attempt until midmorning.

The spokesman said the plastic bomb weighed 10 to 20 pounds.

Cambodian police sources said they were seeking a youth about 18 who was seen pushing the bicycle out of an alleyway into the path of the ambassador's limousine.

Cambodian police took charge of the investigation. They said the youth, who appeared to be alone, ran off as soon as he pushed the bicycle about 10 feet into the path of the car.

The sources said a pressure -type detonator had been attached to the bomb and it was set to explode on contact with the car.

Swank, 49, and married, entered the diplomatic service in 1946. He has served in Shanghai, Tsingtao, Batavia, Jakarta, Moscow, Bucharest and Vientiane. He is a native of Frederick, Md.

In April, another terrorist bomb that failed to explode was contained in a school bag thrown from a passing motorcycle at an American Embassy car waiting to pick up a passenger.

Simultaneous attacks were made June 1 on a Marine guard residence and quarters for members of the U.S. military equipment delivery team. Two Americans were injured in these attacks.

Governor Nominee's Nephew Missing In K.C.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — John Holmes, the 18-year-old nephew of Mississippi Democratic gubernatorial nominee Bill Waller, has been missing in Kansas City since Aug. 28, it was disclosed Monday night.

Holmes, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Holmes of Jackson, Miss., was one of several Mississippi State University students who came to Kansas City in June to sell books door-to-door for the Southwestern Book Co. Holmes and David Goss, another salesman rented an apartment.

The Kansas City Times said in its Tuesday editions that Holmes was dropped off at an intersection in the city on the day of his disappearance by Eddie Richardson, 21, Jackson, Tenn., another company employe. Richardson told Holmes to meet him at the same location at 9 p.m. to be picked up.

The newspaper said Richardson contacted police but could not supply them with enough information to make a search worthwhile. Rather than alarm the boy's parents, the other boys decided to wait several days to see if Holmes showed up.

Richardson called Holmes's parents Aug. 31 in Jackson to notify them, and his father came to Kansas City two days later. He has hired a detective agency to search for his son, the Times said.

The Times quoted the boy's father as saying:

"He left his car in the apartment lot and all his clothes and belongings in the apartment. Disappearing like this is very uncharacteristic of him. He was just rarin' to get started at Mississippi State this fall."

Holmes said his son had been beaten and robbed several times while engaged in door-todoor selling.

"We don't know if he's lost his memory or run away or even if he's still alive," the father said.

Ann Landers

Grandmother Feels She Has Done Her Duty

Dear Ann Landers: You are a sworn enemy of every person in this country over 55 years of age. Why? Because you keep telling people they can maintain active sex lives into the sixties and seventies and even the eighties.

Well, maybe a few oddballs and bedroom acrobats can, but most normal people are glad to be through with sex when they reach the late 50's. Especially the women.

You also fail to take into account that some people just don't happen to consider carnal knowledge an important part of their lives, even when they are young. They enjoy members of the opposite sex--there is respect, companionship and intellectual stimulation, but no burning desire to get physical.

People like you who promote and glamorize sex for elderly folks do a great deal of harm. As a mother of seven children, 31 grandchildren and seven- great-grandchildren I feel I have earned my rest and I don't need you to tell me I am over the hill.--Done My Duty.

Dear Done: I was not aware that I've been "touting and glamorizing" sex for members of the Social Security set. I have, however, said repeatedly, that it is possible for couples to remain sexually active in their 70's and even 80's and that such activity is neither unhealthy, immoral nor obscene.

A woman, no matter what her age, who says she has earned her "rest" suggests that sex was "work". And herein lies your problem, Ma'am.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I did something this summer we've been wanting to do for 15 years. We took a cross-country car trip from Maine to California. We saw and learned a lot. The most disturbing part of our trip was the realization that a large number of people don't care about their pets.

We counted five dead dogs who had been struck by cars and 11 lost dogs some of them with bleeding paws, trotting along the road. One little mutt was so exhaused we stopped and took him to the next service station, gave him some cool water and called the local humane society. If we hadn't come along he surely would have died. It was 104 degrees in Oklahom City that day.

The first thing people can do is not let their dogs run loose. The second thing is to put identification tags around the dogs' necks. It would improve the chances of the rightful owners getting them back. My secret hunch is that these folks don't really care about their pets or they would not be running loose on the highways.---Witness to Sad Scene

Dear Wit: Thank you for letting us see a bit of the country through your eyes. I agree, the scene is a sad one and I thank you for describing it.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice stank again. I refer to the 20-year mistress of the married man. She said she had given him the only love he had ever known and now that he had suffered two coronaries she was wondering about her rightful place at the funeral if he should die. The woman wrote a very poignant letter. She said that after 20 years of devotion she was entitled to some status. You told her (in your usual cold -blooded way) that in our cultural setup, a married man's mistress has not status --his wife gets it all.

Don't you see how rotten and unfair this is? Open your eyes and start to give some decent advice. Or quit. --- Hal's True Love

Dear Love: It may be unfair, but I believe in telling it like it is. and this is the way it is.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What't wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts. ," enclosing with your request 35 cemts oin coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Campbell Calls Back Second Batch Of Soup

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Campbell Soup Co. has ordered 53,280 cans of vegetarian vegetable soup from its Paris, Tex., plant recalled.

It was the second batch of soup from the same plant recalled within 10 days.

The firm described the new recall Tuesday as a precautionary measure.

The Food and Drug Administration said tests on the vegetarian vegetable found a bacteria that could only exist under conditions similar to those required by the organism that produces the deadly poison botulin. Bacteria are normally killed by high-heat processing.

Botulin was found Aug. 21 in part of a 200,000-can batch of Campbell's chicken vegetable sop. The FDA said further tests for botulin were being conducted on the vegetarian vegetable soup.

A company spokesman said no deaths or illness had been reported connected to either of the soups.

The vegetarian vegetable soup was piacked last July 2 and shipped to wholesalers in Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Louisiana, Missouri, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kansas and Texas.

Florida officials announced today they had found 13 of the cans in the Pensacola area as part of an inspection program in 15 northwest Florida counties near the Alabama border.

The soup ordered recalled Tuesday bears the identifying code 15-CT-7B1X.

The FDA said the tests were ordered when several cans from the batch were found to contain soup that had spoiled.

Watch The Rush

Big Red Preview

ST. LOUIS AP — The St. Louis Cardinals' Bob Hollway has ideas on "big plays" in football, and a major percentage revolves around defense.

Thus the Cardinals' new head coach, installed in February, is more concerned about pass rush than rushing prior to the National Football League season but two weeks away.

Hollway, four-season drill instructor for the Minnesota Vikings' famed Purple People-Eaters under Bud Grant, comes by his attitudes naturally.

"When the Vikings won the NFL title in 1969 we had just as many points resulting from the 'big play' on defense as we did the big play on offense," he says.

"On defense you've always got to be on the attack, forcing the other team to make mistakes. Offense is inconsistent. The defense, if it's secure, will keep you in every game."

In remolding a basically stout Cardinals defense thin only at linebacking, his early anxieties have been lack of pressure on opposing quarterbacks in three preseason games and dropped passes, both offensively and defensively.

"A lot of pass rush may be raw, natural ability and it seems that the only player we have with the ability to be a great rusher is Ron Yankowski," Hollway remarks.

In referring to Yankowski, a 6-foot-5, 225-pound rookie defensive end Hollway hinted changes could occur in a front four last year consisting of Rolf Krueger, Bob Rowe, Fred Heron and Chuck Walker, all of whom are back.

Hollway inherited a club which he concedes "has championship potential" and "the potential to go all the way offensively on any play." The Cards, after a strong beginning in 1970, faltered and finished 8-5 1, third in the National Conference East.

Departments Hollway considers strong and stable include the defensive secondary-which consists of cornerbacks Roger Urhrli and Miller Farr and safeties Larry Wilson and Jerry Stovall-the receiving and the running.

Tank-like MacArthur Lane busted through opponents' lines for 977 yards in 197 on third best in the NFC, and vests Johnny Roland andCid Edwards added 392 and 350, respectively.

If the Cardinals are bereft of a top-echelon quarterback, Hollway has shown no dismay. Jim Hart and Pete Beathard are neck-and-neck for the starting job. "Either can do the job, but it won't be both," Hollway says.

Bigger questions marks than those posed by a mistake-rid-den offense in a 1-2 preseason record to date are those involving linebacking and an offensive line showing the wear and tear of age.

Tackles Ernie McMillan and Bob Reynolds are good but are 33 and 32 years old. Guard Irv Goode is 30, Guard Clyde Williams 30 and third-season center Wayne Mulligan, only 24, is out with a shoulder dislocation.

The Cardinals' linebacking stock sagged following the loss to Cincinnati when right linebacker Don Parish, the club's top rookie in 1970, was sheleved with a knee injury.

Russell Leads Way In Softball Finals

Tom Russell isn't only a good pitcher. He's bound to be a good luck charm. At least that's the way it seems after the big righthander played a key role in heading Saveway Scott City from the losers bracket of the fast pitch softball tournament to the championship Saturday night.

Russell pitched 18 innings and won Saveway's last three games in the Tournament Thursday and Saturday, beating Presley Travel Trailer Saturday night, 201, for the title.

He worked two innings for the win, striking out four of six batters. Thursday the curveballing artist pitched 16 innings, nine to beat City Light and Water and seven to hand Presley its first tournament defeat to move into the title bout.

Charlie Menz blasted a triple with two out to drive home Jack Smith in the top of the 13th inning Saturday for the decisive run. Presley took a 1-0 lead in the first and Saveway tied it in the second.

Steve Cotney and Russell teamed to check Presley on three hits Saturday. Cotney fanned 10 batters while Russell sent four to the dugout carrying their bats.

Mike O O'Brein paced Scott City's seven-hit attack off Bob Blair, the tourney's only no-hit pitcher, with three safeties in five trips to the plate.

COUNTDOWN TO KICKOFF

Couches Pick-em

(First In a Series on SEMO High School Football)

The Malden Green Wave, runners-up in the AA state football playoffs in 1969, were unanimous choices to win the coveted southern division title by five coaches responding to a Daily Standard poll at the beginning of drills Aug. 15.

Coach Jack Phillips' crew, who have carried the league honors three straight years, finished the 1970 campaign with a share of the league honors with Dexter and had a 7-2-0 overall mark, losing to Piggott, Ark. and Dexter.

Coaches in the other divisions (northern and Bootheel), weren't unanimous, but put confidence in Poplar Bluff in the north and Illmo-Scott City in the Bootheel. Five coaches responded from the north while three returned ballots from the south.

Cape Girardeau Central, defending northern champ, was the coaches pick to pressure the Mules for the highly taunted honors. The Bengals polled four second place votes along with one compared to four firsts for Bluff and a Third.

Gideon was a close second in the Bootheel balloting while South Pemiscot drew a first place vote with I-SC picking up the other top votes from the league mentors responding.

Southern division coaches picked a big four-way race for second. Only five points separated the second, third, fourth and fifth place teams. Portageville drew the nod by one point over Caruthersville with Dexter and East Prairie running a close fourth and fifth, followed by Hayti and Chaffee in a close battle for the cellar.

Balloting was close in the northern division for the third to seventh places. Coaches picked Bluff and Cape to battle it out for the league honors with the pairs Oct. 15 battle to decide the champ.

Perryville and Sikeston were rated third and fourth with only one vote separating the pair. Jackson, Charleston and Kennett were selected to round out the league standings. Cape got only one first place nod while Bluff picked up the remaining four.

Lolich Equals Blues Record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I'm 31 and he's 22," Mickey Lolich commented.

Actually, they're both 23 and 24—Lolich of the Detroit Tigers, and Vida Blue of the Oakland A's have won 23 games apiece and gone the route 24 times, tops in the American League.

Lolich joined Blue Monday, mastering the Washington Senators with a six-hitter for a 3-0 victory—but he may have to resume his pursuit of the A's 22year-old left-hander, scheduled to take the mound tonight against California.

"Because of his popularity," Lolich said of Blue, "he's bound to win all the awards. You can't give the Most Valuable Player Award to one pitcher and give the Cy Young Award (for the best pitcher) to another. You just can't do it."

Lolich's second-place Tigers picked up half a game to move within 9½ of pennant-bound Baltimore in the American League East as the Orioles split a Labor Day doubleheader with Cleveland, winning 10-5 before the Indians won the nightcap 1-0.

In other AL action, the California Angeles beat the A's 4-2 and, in three more holidaytwinbills, the New York Yankees swept Boston 5-3 and 3-0, the Chicago White Sox defeated Minnesota 6-3 then lost to the Twins 10-3 and Kansas City swept a pair from Milwaukee, 4-3 and 6-4.

"I don't know how many hitters in this league he can get out with his fast ball," Lolich, who mixes his pitches up well, said of Oakland's flamethrowing southpaw.

"I don't have the great fast ball that he has. I have to pitch more. I have to work harder ... I've pitched so much this year, I'll take anything that comes along. I'm not even pitching one inning at a time. I'm pitching one hitter at a time."

He breezed past the Senators while the Tigers gave him the only run he needed in the first inning on Aurelio Rodriguez' triple and Gates Brown's grounder.

Lolich, cruising to his fourth complete game and second in a row, brought home Detroit's second run with a fifth-inning squeeze bunt and the Tigers wrapped it up in the ninth on Bill Freehan's double and Mickey Stanley's triple.

Boog Powell's fourth career grand slam home run highlighted Baltimore's five-run eighth inning in the opener and Andy Etchebarren and Curt Motton added round-trippers, offsetting homers by Cleveland's Ray Fosse and Chris Chambliss.

But Fred Stanley's run-scoring single in the fourth inning of the nightcap was all the Tribe needed as Vince Colbert and Steve Dunning teamed to silence the Orioles on seven hits.

Tony Gonzalez and Roger Repoz stunned Oakland's 15-game winner, Chuck Dobson, with successive two-out homers in the top of the ninth for the Angels.

Ron Swoboda won the Yankees' opener with a two-run pinch single in the eighth inning, then saved it with a spectacular catch in the ninth as he crashed into the right field stands to rob Reggie Smith of a game-tying homer.

They made it a sweep as Horace Clarke snapped a scoreless tie in the eighth with a two-run triple off Red Sox rookie John Curtis.

Leaders Hold 7-Game Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Pittsburgh Pirates are better off than they were one year ago and the Los Angeles Dodgers are better off than they were one day ago.

As a result of Labor Day activity in the National League, the Pirates hold a seven-game lead in the East Division while the Dodgers trail San Francisco by the same aount in the West.

Pittsburgh swept a doubleheader from the Chicago Cubs 4-1 and 10-5 while Los Angeles trimmed San Francisco 52.

Elsewhere, St. Louis split with Philadelphia, winning 6-3 and losing 2-1; the New York Mets trounced Montreal 7-0, Houston beat Atlanta 6-4 and Cincinnati nipped San Diego 10.

In the American League, Baltimore defeated Cleveland 10-5 before losing 1-0, Detroit blanked Washington 3-0, the New York Yankees took two from Boston 5-3 and 3-0, California topped Oakland 4-2, the Chicago White Sox downed Minnesota 6-3 but dropped the nightcap 10-3 and Kansas City swept Milwaukee 4-3 and 6-4.

Nelson Briles checked the Cubs on three in Pittsburgh's opener, the first complete game by a Pirate hurler in 16 starts, and hot-hitting Rennie Stennett set up two runs with a double and triple.

Gene Alley, Stennett and Clines singled in the third inning of the nightcap, tying the score 2-2, and Roberto Clemente was purposely passed so southpaw Ken Holtzman could face left-swinging Willie Stargell.

Stargell ruined that strategy with his 44th home run of the season and second grand slam. Al Oliver hit a two-run homer in the seventh while Joe Pepitone connected for the skidding Cubs, who dropped into fourth place 12 games back.

A year ago, the Bucs had a two-game lead and went on to win the division by five.

Ron Stone's sixth-inning sacrifice fly gave the Phillies their second game triumph over the Cards after the Redbirds took the opener behind Bob Gibson on the strength of a six-run outburst in the third inning, capped by Joe Hague's three-run homer.

But the big news was a fourth-inning fight in the first game between Philadelphia catcher Tim McCarver and St. Louis outfielder Lou Brock, former teammates on the Cards.

The hard feelings apparently began an inning earlier when McCarver dropped a pop foul in front of the St. Louis dugout and took some needling, which he thought came from Brock.

Brock insisted he didn't get on McCarver, but when he came to bat in the fourth the outfielder had to jump away from two inside pitches from rookie reliever Manny Muniz.

Brock started for the mound—but McCarver intercepted him, saying, "He's only a kid." "Well," answered Brock, "if it happens again I'll fight you."

"I don't go for these talkingshoving matches," explained McCarver, who punched Brock twice before the umpires pulled him away and was ejected from the game for his trouble.

Afterwards, both parties were willing to forgive and forget.

Broyles Leads Fisk To Finals

DUDLEY — Larry Broyles laced a two out single in the ninth, driving in two runs to break up a 1-1 deadlock and send Fisk into the finals of the Southeast Missouri Men's Independent League baseball tournament Sunday afternoon with a 3-1 verdict over Parma.

Steve Coulson, former Three Rivers junior college ace pitcher, picked up the win allowing four hits and striking out 12, sending eight out of the last 12 batters he faced to the bench with strikeouts.

Fisk scored an unearned run in the first inning and got only two hits through the first eight frames before bunching two singles with two outs and an error to score two runs off Mike Dambach.

Dambach, former prep standout at Lilbourn who now plays at Southeast Missouri State, scored Parma's only run. The speedy righthander sped home with two out in the seventh when a baserunner was caught in a rundown between first and second.

Pat McClarty, all state high school centerfielder from Lilbourn, ripped two doubles off Coulson, who led his team's hitting with two singles.

PRO CHARTS

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

American Conference: Eastern Division

4—NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

PROSPECTUS—Back Bay shuffle has really dredged up something—new name, new coach, new stadium, new general manager, new quarterback. But a lot of the old player personnel problems. Mainly, not enough class bodies to fill all the slots. With lousiest record in pro ball, Patriots haven't been exuberantly successful in dispelling losing image. They've lost at least 10 games a season since '66. They'll still lose.

Offense

PASSING — Era of Jim Plunkett about to begin, Joe Kapp willing. Pats have cornered market on QBs of Mexican descent. Actually, Plunkett can't miss. Contract hassle could eliminate Kapp, who throws knuckleballs but breathes fire. Rating—B.

RUNNING — Suspicion that Bo Nance, all wobbly 250 pounds of him, may have had it. Carl Garrett's kind of runner coveted by other teams, but life with Patriots hasn't been mutually compatible so far. Potentially, these guys could do it, but don't hold your breath. Young Odell Lawson will see lots of action.—Rating—B—.

RECEIVING — Start with Ron Sellers, who hasn't performed up to his potential for two years, and stop right there. There's been some question about Sellers catching in crowd, but he's really topflight material. But Pats desperately need another wide receiver, and there's no bonafide tight end around either, with Tom Beer switched to guard. Rating—C—.

LINE — Couple of years ago Pats thought they had topflight unit. Good center in Jon Morris, rugged guards in Mike Montler, Len St. Jean, adequate tackles. But last year their protection broke down. Or maybe it was their morale under the operating conditions. At any rate, one of Coach Johnny Mazur's big jobs is to spark them back up. Rating—C+.

Defense

LINE—Until Phil Olsen defected (club ridiculously neglected to pick up his option), Pats were chortling. They're still not in too bad shape if they can wheedle just one more season out of chunky tackle vets Houston Antwine, Earthquake Hunt, Ike Lassiter, decked last year with bad knee, could flash back to old Oakland Raider form. Ron Berger has size to deliver pass rush at end. And there are big hopes for draftee Julius Adams, a tackle. Rating—B—.

LINEBACKING—In a state of flux. Lot of candidates, no sure things, not even logical starter Jim Cheyunski in middle, who had knee operation. Best of crew in '70 was Bull Bramlett, team MVP. He's a red hot emotionally, but not among league's premier performers. Couple of Notre Damers, Bobo Olson and Tim Kelly, have chance to help. Rating—C.

SECONDARY — Not bad. Maybe best part of team. Daryl Johnson at one corner is all-star stuff; other corner Don Webb still looks healthy enough, in 11th year. Larry Carwell had good year at safety, and soph Clarence Scott hits hard. Also have Art McMahon and Dick Farley (ex-Charger) to push them. Rating—B.

KICKING—Can Gino Cappelletti kick 'em up one more year? Can Charlie Gogolak get more trajectory? Can Tommy Janik get punts up to 40-per? Don't ask. Rating—C.

Chess-It's No Mere Game

By Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON – Bobby Fischer of the United States is scheduled to face Tigran Petrosian of the Soviet Union in the semifinals of the world chess challengers tournament beginning between Sept. 12 and 15 at a site still to be announced, possibly Yugoslavia. The winner will challenge world champion Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union for the world title in March 1972.

George Bernard Shaw called chess "a foolish expedient for making idle people believe they are doing something very clever, when they are only wasting their time." That may still be the majority opinion. But there are those like French artist Marcel Duchamp who see the subliminal attraction of the royal game.

"In chess," he says, "there are some extremely beautiful things in the domain of movement, but not in the visual domain. It's the imagining of the movement or of the gesture that makes the beauty ... It.s completely in one's gray matter."

Even Duchamp concedes that the milieu of chess players is a bit rarified. "These people are completely cloudy, completely blind, wearing blinkers – madmen of a certain quality, the way the artist is supposed to be, and isn't, in general." He might have had Bobby Fischer of Brooklyn, N.Y., in mind.

Fischer at age 28 no longer can qualify as the enfant terrible of bigtime chess. After 14 years in competition, his temper is under tighter control, although his life style remains appropriately bizarre. Fischer lives out of a succession of hotel rooms; goes to bed at 5 a.m. and gets up at 3 p.m.; complains unduly about noise; dines at the Automat on watermelon and tomato juice; dresses in a style that has been described as "late Goodwill"; and thinks about little but chess.

In pursuit of the world championship that has been a Soviet monopoly since 1948, Fischer has won his last 19 games in matches against grandmasters. Chess experts groping for a parallel to make Fischer's feat intelligible to nonplayers speak of hitting 19 home runs in 19 at-bats. Sports Illustrated notes that the analogy is inexact because as a rule "more top - level chess games are drawn than are won or lost. A hard - pressed grandmaster can usually force a draw."

Not against the high - school dropout. In a typical demonstration, Fischer on Aug. 9 demolished 11 grandmasters and masters in a rapid - fire tournament at the Manhattan Chess Club where Fischer started playing at age 10. One of his victims commented: "You know you're going to lose. Even when I was ahead I had a feeling."

The upcoming match with Petrosian is seen as a crucial test of Fischer's stamina and patience. The Guardian Weekly warns that Petrosian "has a reputation for negative waiting play" and might settle for winning the first game and then trying to close up the match with half - points obtained through draws.

In his typical aggressive style, Fischer already has created a controversy by charging that the Russians "have no sense of sportsmanship," and that they find ways to take advice from their seconds or arrange the schedule against their opponents. The upcoming Petrosian - Fischer match is reported to be the talk of Moscow, but it has attracted little attention in the United States.

Fischer's explanation for the comparative unpopularity of chess in America is hardly flattering. "people don't want to concentrate. It's too painful." To devotees like Fischer, chess may be a science and a sport but it's no mere game.

Interstate 55, a dance band from Memphis, will perform Friday at 9 p.m. at the Portagevill Armory at the National Soybean Festival. The group will be presented by the Portageville Jaycees.

Lilbourn Scouts Complete Projects

LILBOURN – Most of the scouts of Troop 50 have been very active during the summer. From June 20 to 26 the scouts, accompanied by their scoutmaster, attended Camp Lewallen, where they participated in the various camping activities and earned a number of merit badges. All reported having a good time and had words of praise for the camp staff members. Assistant scoutmaster, Mike Smith, was a member of the summer camp staff. A number of parents from Lilbourn visited camp and witnessed the Order of Arrow call - out ceremony. Troop committee chairman Bill Jones, and scouts Jeff Stark, Lonnie Ponder, Billy Rodman and Charles "Chuckie" Johnson were among those called out. They returned to Camp Lewallen on August 13-15 where they completed the OA ordeal ceremonies.

After returning from camp most of the scouts have continued to work on advancements and merit badges, having earned a total of 55 merit badges since the last court of honor. The next court of honor will be held early in October.

Three boys of the troop are nearing the Eagle rank. In addition to earning 21 merit badges for the Eagle rank, a scout must carry out a service project helpful to the school, church or community. Brad Jones, Mitchell Allen and Billy Rodman selected to tidy up the City Park for their project. Each boy devoted more than 10 hours to removing grass and weeds from the sidewalk. A number of people stopped to kid the scouts and asked why they were having to work out a city fine. The project completed and the scouts think you will agree by observing the before and after pictures that the sidewalk does look better.

As a Life Scout project, Lonnie Ponder and Jeff Stark selected to re-do the floor of the City Hall where the weekly meetings of the Kiwanis Club are held. They devoted several hours to cleaning and painting the floor. The CIC ladies and the Kiwanis members are glad that the boys selected this project.

Scouting is on the upward trail in Lilbourn, but den mothers are needed for a cub pack. The Kiwanis Club sponsors of the scouting programs in Lilbourn. Anyone interested in helping with a cub pack should see Bill Jones, committee chairman or L. D. Fish, member of committee.

Section Of School Grounds To Be Sold

CHARLESTON – CHARLESTON – The R-1 Board of Education held its August meeting Thursday night and authorized president Ralph Adkisson to sign papers selling about one-half acre of the Lincoln School grounds to the Charleston urban renewal authority.

The sale is made subject to an opinion by the board attorney as to legality of the transfer.

The board accepted the resignations of Mrs. Elna Ruth Cook and Miss Marsha McKeldin from the faculty. Mrs. Cook taught music in the elementary grades, and Miss McKeldin was an English teacher at CHS.

A leave of absence was granted to Louis Hunley III, a teacher at the A. D. Simpson School, who is returning to school for additional training.

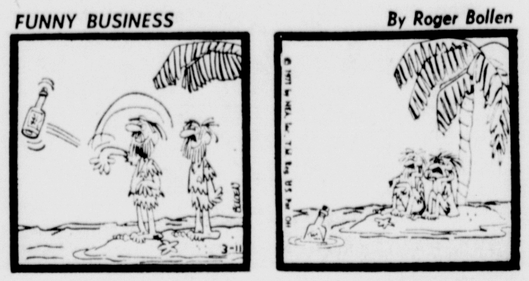
Contracts were approved for the following: Willie D. Fitzgerald, Myrtle Fitzgerald, Pamela Rose Gempel, Floyd Gene King, and Shelton Smith.

Bids on bus insurance were opened, and the contract was awarded to Cliff Morris, State Farm Agent at Sikeston.

The board also voted to pay for major medical insurance coverage for all members of the faculty. The group policy is purchased through the Missouri State Teachers Association.

Teachers will continue to pay for coverage for dependents, if desired.

FUNNY BUSINESS — By Roger Bollen



Camping Areas Will Be Closed

JEFFERSON CITY – Camping areas worn out by long and heavy usage will be closed Jan. 1, 1972, according to the Director of Missouri State Parks, Joseph Jaeger, Jr.

Areas in Bennett Spring State Park near Lebanon, Montauk State Park near Salem, and Roaring River State Park near Cassville, will be closed for rest, redesign, and restoration.

Jaeger noted, "Heavy use has destroyed the ground cover in certainly heavy use areas causing erosion and loss of topsoil. The resulting soil compaction is contributing to the early death of trees. We must close these areas in order to fulfill our responsibility of preservation and maintain a balanced ecological system."

The specific areas effected are the campground on the northeast side of the stream behind the dining lodge at Bennett Spring State Park; the upper campground at Montauk State Park on the west side of the stream; and campgrounds two and six at Roaring River State Park which are across from the dining lodge and a small area near the cabins.

Jaeger added that these three parks were among the first acquired, Bennett Spring in 1924, Montauk in 1926, and Roaring River in 1928. He pointed out, "Land, just like a carpet, wears out if too many people walk, camp or drive across it too often. This land must be rested to restore it to usefulness."

OVERCROWDING in state park campgrounds has destroyed ground cover causing erosion and loss of topsoil. Resulting soil compaction contributes to the early death of trees. Some of the most seriously affected areas will be closed for restoration, according to Joseph Jaeger, Jr., Director of parks.

Mr. Charles Blanton
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri 63801

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I am writing in regard to the recent articles in your newspaper concerning the labor management discussions. What kind of Chamber of Commerce do we have that would fight economic prosperity? Do the people of Sikeston realize why the Chamber and the City fathers are against organized labor?

The people of the Chamber, the city government, and the big businessmen are all against labor for the simple reason that they want to keep the little man little and the big man big. By this I mean that they want to keep the working man's wages down so they can reap a larger monetary reward. Don't they know or do they care, that better wages for the blue collar workers will mean added prosperity for everyone in the area?

There is an old axiom that these people seem to want to live by, "The rich get richer and the poor get poorer." Have they asked themselves why Sikeston does not have as high per capita income as do our northern cities and towns where the blue collar workers are for the most part members of labor unions. These same businessmen would love to pay their employees wages ranging from $1.50 to $2.00 per hour, and yet keep raising their prices, without raising wages.

We hear a lot about organized labor being a big factor in causing inflation. Isn't it strange that the cost of living in Sikeston is higher than that of many places where the work mostly organized. If you doubt this ask anyone from St. Louis about the prices in the stores, here as compared to there.

I have lived in several places across the county and this area has the highest cost of living yet. Do they blame this on organized labor too.

The other day I heard a Sikeston businessman remark that no man is worth $4.00 per hour, yet I am sure his salary would be in the 40 to 50 thousand dollar bracket. How can a man with a family have a decent standard of living on $60 to $90 per week? The same businessmen that bitch about the Noranda project have made thousands of dollars from the union people working there. How many thousands of union dollars have been spent in Sikeston for housing food, clothes, entertainment etc? Their attitude toward organized labor looks like they are biting the hand that feeds them.

To set the record straight, you inferred that the various cities such as Sikeston, Poplar Bluff and Cape decided to have these labor management meetings. That is false. The idea was conceived byDick Floatron, business agent for the Electricians union. He wanted to discuss the various problems with the Chambers and to reach some kind of rappor. Isn't it strange that Clem Beal, acting for the Chamber, was criticized for going to the discussion? How does the Chamber expect to improve conditions if they "bury their heads in the sand" and won't even try to hear the other side of the story?

The objectives of the discussions as stated by the Sikeston Chamber are "to aid their grievances to members of organized labor and is designed only to erase a bad image of organized labor in Southeast Missouri. Now I ask you does the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce sound open minded to anything?

Dear Mr. Blanton:

Enclosed please find two letters that speak for themsleves. This is the second time Mr. Symington's office has shown with what inefficiency it operates. it reminds me of a poem I read somewhere recently:

Dear Senator:

I see where another guaranteed annual income plan has been passed by the House in a vote of 288 to 132 and is on its way to the Senate.

I still believe enactment of this legislation would invite more economic disaster for this nation. In our state the number of people on welfare rolls would be increased to 443,100!

I hope you will do everything in your power to oppose this legislation.

Very Truly yours,
Mrs. Harry Bock

Dear Mrs. Bock:

Acknowlegding your recent letter, we understand your disappointment over action taken by the State government to reduce the assistance you receive from the Missouri Division of Welfare because of the recent increase in Social Security benefits.

Legislation has been introduced to prohibit such action from being taken in the future. This bill, S. 858, is currently pending before the Senate Finance Committee which has been advised of the interest many Missourians have expressed in legislation for this purpose.

I appreciate receiving your comments, and share your concern over the difficulties of those who are trying to live on fixed income in these inflationary times. Be assured we will follow the progress of S. 858 with great interest and concern.

Sincerely,
Stuart Symington.

Charleston Council Okays Renewal Plan

CHARLESTON — A master plan for rebuilding nearly a fourth of the city of Charleston was approved by theCity Council at a special meeting Monday night, and the city's urban renewal plan was taken to St. Louis on Wednesday for final approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development regional office there.

The plan calls for a capital improvements grant of $4,153,222 from the federal government, a figure which is about $600,000 higher than the ''grant reservation" announced by HUD in March.

Tanna Parish, executive director of the local urban renewal program, said the difference is due to changes in federal law relative to relocation allowances for persons displaced from their homes by urban renewal land clearance activities.

The new "replacement housing'' payments (the difference between what urban renewal pays for a condemned house and what the owner-occupant family needs to build or buy a standard home of adequate size) may be as much as $15,000. The previous limit was $5,000.

There are other relocation grants — for moving expenses, a "dislocation allowance", grants to present tenants for down payments on new homes, displacements for businesses, and a sort of equalization payment for a four year period which pays tenants or owners the difference between what they have to pay for standard housing and what they can afford to pay, based on a complicated formula. This can be as high as $1,000 per year.

Under the plan approved by the City Council and sent to St. Louis Tuesday, some 218 families and 132 individuals would be displaced from their present homes. In addition, 38 commercial and nine industrial firms would be displaced, as would one church.

Most of these families, individuals and institutions would qualify for some sort of relocation grants. A total of $1,543,360 is set aside in the project budget for these grants.

The budget also calls for $2,522,362 in federal money for capital improvements. This includes purchase of existing property, relocation and paving of streets, installation of water and sewer facilities, and other expenses incurred in developing the property into suitable standard size housing lots and business sites.

The actual cost of these improvements is considerably higher than the amount budgeted, but the cost is somewhat offset by the resale of property after it is cleared, for redevelopment by private owners.

An $87,500 amount in the budget is set a side to be paid to owner-occupants of existing property which can be rehabilitated and brought up to housing code standards. The maximum grant possible under this section of the budget is $3,500.

The planning phase of the local urban renewal program has been completed in near-record time, according to Ron Denton, a representative of R. W. Booker and Associated, St. Louis, the consulting firm which prepared the final plan for submission to HUD.

The final plan is contained in an 8½x14-inch book about four inches thick and the book is available for public inspection at the Urban Renewal Authority's temporary office in the Chamber of Commerce headquarters on East Commercial Street and at City Hall.

Approval by HUD of the final plan and actual start of urban renewal operations is expected within the next three weeks, according to Mr. Parish.

To summarize some of the major residential area changes envisioned by the urban renewal plan:

All remaining streets in the project area will be paved.

Slum dwellings east of the Lincoln School would be razed, several streets closed, and the land replatted in standard size house lots for sale to private individuals. A new Green Street, with a circular drive at one end, would be the heart of this redeveloped area. Similar redevelopment would take place in the entire area between South Elm Street and South Grand Avenue, with the area zoned for single-family occupancy.

The Lincoln School site would be reserved for development as a park and community building.

In the downtown area of Charleston, several changes are also planned:

A large off-street parking lot will be created on the north side of West Commercial Street, from Franklin to Center Streets, and the property surrounding the lot will be cleared for sale to developers as a downtown "shopping center."

A smaller off-street parking lot will be created on the north side of East Cypress Street between Main and First Streets, and seven blocks of side streets in the downtown area will be closed to through traffic and converted into diagonal parking zones, as shown on the map.

A pedestrian mall will be created on the north side of East Cypress Street between Main and First Streets, and seven blocks of side streets in the downtown area will be closed to through traffic and converted into diagonal parking zones.

A pedestrial mall will be created from Main Street to the off-street parking lot by the elimination of several buildings on the west side of North Main Street, with room in the mall for a small park with trees, benches and possibly a fountain.

Parish said Tuesday that all matters relating to the urban renewal project, with the exception of appraisal figures on the property, are now a matter of public record, since the City Council adopted a resolution giving the plan the force of law in the urban renewal project area. No building permits will be issued in the project area unless the proposed construction conforms to land use provisions of the council approved plan.

Bond Issue May Be Resubmitted

CARUTHERSIVLLE — A re-submit a recreation bond petition is being circulated in Caruthersville in an effort to issue, defeated at the polls Tuesday, to the voters again for reconsideration.

A spokesman at the Caruthersville city hall said a call was received in the office of the city clerk, inquiring about the technical wording of a petition.

Five-hundred names of registered city voters are sought on the petition, which requests the issue be brought before the voters again. Tuesday, a majority approved the $60,000 issue, which would be the city's share of $500,000 in federal monies for a swimming pool and recreation center, however, the majority given the issue was not a two-thirds majority, required for its passage.

The bond measure would raise the city tax rate to its former $2.10 valuation, since the city recently lowered the rax rate from $2.10 to $2. The vote Tuesday was 461 for and 378 against. The bond would pave the way for funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development for a community center complex and the county's only public swimming pool.

Way Cleared For 80 New Apartments

CHARLESTON -- The City Council conducted a public hearing Monday night on the proposed Urban Renewal plan, and adopted a resolution giving the plan the force of law in the project area.

In other action Monday night, the Council approved the rezoning of a portion of the S & S Subdivision and the Howlett property north of the new Charleston R-1 High School from R-1 to R-2.

The zoning change, which would permit the constructinon of apartment houses in the area, had already been approved by the city Planning and Zoning Commission. It was made at the request of a Memphis Firm AMCON Inc., which proposes to build 50 units of apartment housing for moderate - income families on the Howlett property, and 30 units on the S & S property.

The council also heard a report on two other housing projects planned for Charleston. One, to be built by the Housing Authority, would consist of 100 units for the elderly, and would be built on a site in the urban renewal project area north of Marshall Street with South Locust Street running down the center.

AMCON was interested in Charleston through the efforts of George Story of the Chamber of Commerce housing committee.

The other proposal is for 100 units of housing to be built by private capital and leased to the housing authority. Details of this plan are not yet available.

City Manager Dick Martin said approval and construction of the two projects, plus the AMCON housing, would give Charleston over 380 new housing units within the near future. This figure includes the 110 units of low - income housing and housing for the elderly now under construction by the Housing Authority.

The Council overruled the Planning and Zoning Commission on two proposals. One would have rezoned the Marshall Reeves property on South Main Street (south of the Mississippi County Savings and Loan Association Building) from R-1 to B-1.

The other proposal would have changed zoning on W. H.Winchester property on South Main Street south of the R-1 administration building from R-1 to B-1. The change was sought to permit the Shelby Funeral home to construct a new funeral chapel. Council sources said it is likely a "special use" zoning change will be adopted, to permit use of the property for a funeral home, but that a blanket approval for general business use would not be given.

Amendment Route Rated Better Revision Method

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The director of the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey has told a joint legislative committee that the amendment process is a more practical method of revising the state constitution than a constitutional convention.

"We find that the need for a constitutional convention does not exist in Missouri at this time," Edward Staples said at a joint hearing of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee and House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

"We encounter no proposed revisions which cannot be adequately dealt with by amendment," Staples said.

The MPES executive director said that the subject matter of the 1945 Missouri constitution is arranged so revisions can be incorporated by amendment in a logical manner. He said that when the convention route is taken, a constitution can be defeated by one or two provisions unpopular with voters.

Staples said that the state constitution requires a vote each 20 years on the question of a constitutional convention, and in 1962 Missouri voters rejected a convention by a vote of 519,499 to 296,972.

Staples slso noted that the cost of a constitutional convention has been estimated at $2.3 million by the state budget office. The convention that drafted the present constitution cost the taxpayers about $1 million, he said.

Overnight Delivery By Oct. 31 Postal Goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service says it will try to guarantee within two months overnight delivery of nearly all local first class mail deposited by 5 p.m.

"The goal is next-day delivery of letters and other first class mail within cities and surrounding areas," said Postmaster General Winton M. Blount.

Regional and local officials will announce by Sept. 9 the exact areas in which overnight delivery of zip coded first class mail can be provided, Blount said.

By Oct. 31, 95 per cent of first class mail deposited within an area should be receiving next day delivery, he said.

The Postal Service said mail must be zip coded to receive such treatment, and must be deposited in collection boxes or post offices.

PROGRESS IN BERLIN
SETBACK IN VIETNAM

BERLIN

For a quarter of a century the four occupying powers in Berlin - the United States, Soviet Union, Great Britain, and France - have had on - again, off- again discussions of "The Berlin Issue."

It all began when World War II hostilities ended and the four powers split up the historic German capital city located 110 miles within Communist East Germany into four sectors.

Post -war Berlin has had a tumultous and at times sad history, including the Berlin blockade of 1948-1949 and the Berlin wall erected in 1961.

Now the four powers have reached an accord on at least some of the Berlin problems. The terms of the accord are still secret pending their approval in the respective capitals. They are purported to provide for unimpeded traffic across travel access routes into Berlin, permitting visits by West Berliners to East Berlin and East Germany, and other matters.

The Berlin wall is not coming down, but the stark confrontation symbolized by that wall has been moderated.

SOUTH VIETNAM ELECTIONS

Time and again both President Johnson and President Nixon have stated one of America's principal purposes for fighting in Vietnam as "The right of all the South Vietnamese people to determine for themselves the kind of government they want."

The October Presidential elections in Vietnam were to be eloquent and dramatic proof of the vitality of that principal. The crowning event of Ambassador Bunker's tour of duty in South Vietnam was to have been a spirited, hotly - contested American - style election with President Thieu emerging victorious as the popular choice of the people.

All of that is over now. First Thieu, hammered out a restrictive election law limiting his opposition to one or two possible candidates; and now those possible candidates, General Big Minh and Vice President Ky, refuse to play out the election charade. Self - determination in Vietnam means the determination of the clique in power to stay in power.

In April, when I visited Vietnam, I wrote the following on the Vietnamese elections:

"Some American interests would like Big Minh to run and may even help financially. They recognize that Thieu will win regardless, but would like to enhance his victory by having him triumph in a 'credible and competitive' election.

"The whole notion of Vietnamese elections has always troubled me. It is we, the United States, who are hung up about elections in Vietnam. We decided that this war - ravaged, backward country with no historical or current experience in the democratic process must be shaped in our image. Since we elect a President, so too must Vietnam, ready or not.

"It salves our conscience. To some it gives surface credence to the argument that 'we are fighting for freedom in South Vietnam.'"

What the last several months of political intrigue by President Thieu shows is that our seventeen years of sacrifice to "give the South Vietnamese a chance to determine their own future" has been manipulated by President Thieu to insure his own political future.

So yet another rationale for our continued presence in Vietnam has been discarded in the wastecan with such past excuses as the "domino theory" and the "need to contain Communist China."

DANFORTH REFUSES TEST CASE ON REVENUE DEPARTMENT AUDIT

JEFFERSON CITY - A dispute over whether the state Department of Revenue can deny the auditor's office access to tax returns has Revenue Director James E. Schaffner backed into a corner. He now must, against his wishes, allow state auditors access to individual, sales and intangible tax returns or face possible legal action.

The controversy began in July when Schaffner refused to make certain tax returns available to state auditors. Under the Missouri Constitution, the State Auditor's office is required to audit all state agencies at least annually. Schaffner cited a law requiring tax returns to be kept confidential.

On July 23, State Auditor Christopher (Kit) Bond requested an official opinion from Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth on the legality of Schaffner's action. In his request, Bond said it was necessary for his office to have access to individual returns on a "sample basis" to effectively audit the revenue department. Danforth's opinion, released Aug. 18, said Bond's office did, in fact, have the authority to view these returns during an audit.

Schaffner disagreed with the opinion "both in theory and because of the laws'which describe his duties and responsibilities. Here requested that Danforth initiate a declaratory judgment action, a test case on the opinion. On Aug. 27, Danforth wrote Schaffner that no test case would be filed.

Danforth also warned Schaffner to abide by the decision. "Should you elect to disregard the opinion of this office," Danforth wrote, "and thwart the auditor in the performance of his constitutional duties, you should be prepared to assume personally the legal consequences of your action."

Schaffner contends that Missouri taxpayers have a right to expect their tax returns to be kept private and confidential. "It is a sacred tradition of our American system of government that individual tax returns should not be seen by anyone except those few government employes directly charged with the responsibility of processing and verifying the accuracy of the returns," Schaffner wrote when requesting a test case. "I believe in this right of privacy for Missouri taxpayers and believe their rights must be defended."

Schaffner acknowledges the auditor's duty to audit the revenue department's financial records, but says it can be done without access to tax returns. "It is not necessary for the auditor to have access to confidential tax returns in performing his duties, any more than he would need access to private medical records of individuals if he were auditing a doctor's office."

Danforth disagrees. Tax returns are filed with the revenue department by law, he says, and represent the taxpayers' determination of what they owe the state. "As such, they show amounts which the department is obliged to collect and are proper for inspection by an auditor."

Although Danforth recognizes the requirement that tax returns be kept from unauthorized disclosure, he does not feel the taxpayers' privacy will be violated if state auditors see the returns. "Confidentiality is not an issue here," he wrote Schaffner when refusing to authorize the test case. "No reason exists to believe that the State Auditor in the performance of his constitutional duties is any more likely to divulge information in tax returns than you in the exercise of your duties."

The essense of Danforth's opinion is that the state's laws prohibiting the disclosure of the contents of tax returns do not apply to the State Auditor, who is granted very broad powers by the Missouri Constitution. Danforth also emphasizes that examiners appointed to audit the state's agencies are prohibited from disclosing any of the information they obtain in their inspections to anyone except the State Auditor.

Although the dispute has focused on legal questions, it probably is based on partisan politics. The revenue department, staffed through the political patronage system, is controlled by the Democrats. Both Danforth and Bond are Republicans, and Bond has attacked the department several times since he took office.

The correspondence between Danforth and Schaffner also indicates the political nature of the argument. For example, when refusing Schaffner's requested test case, Danforth wrote: "If the Department of Revenue is properly performing its duties, I would think you (Schaffner) would welcome verification of this fact by the State Auditor."

Schaffner has been put in a difficult position. He can abide by Danforth's opinion and release tax returns to Bond's auditors, a victory for Bond and Danforth. Or, he can refuse to disclose this information and face the legal action Danforth has promised. The action would not, however, be a "test" case.

Scott City Park Project Proposed

SCOTT CITY — Mayor Cliff Campbell reported that pre-application information for the Scott City park improvement project, a swimming pool and recreation development, has been filed with the State Inter-Agency Council for Outdoor Recreation (BOR).

George E. Butler & Associates, Inc., consulting engineers filled put two applications for the project. One application covers acquisition of property for the project and the second application covers development of the project. This was done in two steps as it is felt that separate priorities will be assigned to the project. It may be that the property acquisition will proceed immediately while approval of the development application may require more time.

Mayor Campbell stated that Butler & Associates are proceeding with developments of the preliminary drawings and cost estimates for the Scott City project and may be completed with them in a few weeks. Mayor Campbell stated that upon completion of the drawings, Mr. Butler will review the project with him and members of the Scott City Park Board. At that time various alternates may be reviewed for consideration and selection of a plan for final development of the project could then be finalized in a report form suitable for filing with the Federal applications and providing necessary information to support a bond election campaign.

Armed Forces

TERCEIRA, Azores -- Harlan L. Langston, whose stepfather is Howard E. Seabaugh of 6 Anthony Court, Arnold, Mo., has been promoted to technical sergeant in the U.S. Air Force.

Sergeant Langston is an aircraft support equipment technician at Lajes Field Azores. He is assigned to a unit of the military airlift command which provides global airlift for the U.S. military forces.

His wife, Wilda, is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth McLain of Advance.

DENVER — Airman Marvin L. Hale, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvin A. Hale of star route, Wappapello, Mo., has graduated at Lowry Air Force Base, from the air force munitions maintenance specialist course.

The airman, now qualified to operate all munitions handling equipment used in Southeast Asia, is being assigned to McConnell AFB, Kan., for duty with a unit of the Tactical Air Command which provides combat units for air support of U.S. ground forces.

Stiffer Rules For Inspection Of Meat

JEFFERSON CITY - The U. S. Department of Agriculture notified the Missouri department of agriculture that stiffer rules were being added to the state meat inspection program and reported a U.S.D.A. intent to take over the state program in 30 days if Missouri was not able to make the necessary corrections.

According to animal health officials of the state Department of agriculture, the corrections were minor ones and work was started immediately on a check of Missouri meat plants.

As of Aug. 31, a total of 82 plants had been ordered closed since the initial federal order was issued. Thirty - six of those 82 plants have been reinspected and reopened. Animal Health officials also indicate that within the next four or five days the number of plants reopened will show a marked increase.

In many instances plants were not closed but only held up in their operations since the minor infractions were corrected on the sopt. For the most part, the Missouri infractions have been lack of water samples and a sewage acceptance letter, plus a lack of denaturant and other sanitation problems.

A wholesome meat act passed by Congress in 1967 requires all states to have a meat inspection program equal to the federal program. Missouri was awarded an "equal -to" status one year ago but, during the intervening period, changes in regulation and review dispositions have been made that brought about the recent Missouri inspection problem.

The Missouri department of agriculture reports that its animal health division is putting forth a 100 per cent effort to correct this most recent problem and officials feel assured that all the federal regulations will be met within the allotted 30 day period. Consumers can be certain that no adulterated meat has been or will be sold to the public.

Amendments Favored To Change Constitution

JEFFERSON CITY — The amendment process is a more practical means of revising Missouri's constitution than a constitutional convention, Edward Staples, executive director of Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, told a joint Missouri Sentate - House Committee meeting in St. Louis today.

When the convention route is taken, he said, a constitution can be carried to defeat by one or two provisions unpopular with voters. It is not unusual, he said, for a single issue to carry a proposed constitution to defeat.

The subject matter of Missouri's constitution is arranged so that revisions, even substantial ones, can be incorporated by amendment in a logical manner, Staples said.

The Survey's director said, "We find that the need for a constitutional convention does not exist in Missouri at this time. We encounter no proposed revisions which cannot be adequately dealt with by amendment."

Missouri's constitution is easier to amend than the constitutions of most states, Staples said. Amendments can be submitted either by the legislature or by initiative. Only about a dozen states permit the initiative, and Missouri is one of 16 states allowing a simple majority of legislators to submit amendments.

The record shows, he said, that issues which at a given time seem to require a convention can be resolved without one.

Staples recalled that a study committee appointed by Governor Dalton in 1962, when the question was on the ballot, found a convention was not needed. A convention was rejected by a 519,000 to 295,000 vote. He also recalled that a minority report of the 1962 study committee listed issues it said justified a convention. They included: Permitting a governor to succeed himself, authorizing annual legislative sessions, providing additional means for St. Louis city and county to unite, and reapportioning the Missouri House.

All have been accomplished, Staples said, either by amendment or through court decision.

Staples said the minority report held that some of the revicions, since adopted, would never be submitted by the legislature. One of these was the amendment permitting a governor to succeed himself.

The minority report also said that reducing the two - thirds vote for local bond issues was a reason for a convention. Voters acted on that issue in 1967, rejecting a reduction to 60 per cent, Staples said.

The two - thirds requirement contributes to a claim that Missouri's constitution is too restrictive, Staples said. That claim also results from various limitations on tax rates and indebtedness of local governments, he said.

But, he said, it does not seem likely that a constitution omitting limitations on tax rates and indebtedness would be approved by the voters, particularly in view of voter attitude reflected in local tax elections in recent years. He recalled that a proposed amendment allowing school boards, county courts and township boards to impose higher tax rates was rejected by the voters last fall.

Some claim Missouri's constitution is too long, Staples said. But a new convention might decide, as did the last one, that lengthy portions should be kept, he said. Provisions covering budgeting and finance, highways and conservation, were retained by framers of the 1945 constitution, because they had been adopted as amendments by the voters, Staples said.

The cost of framing and adopting the present constitution was approximately a million dollars, Staples said. The present cost of a convention was placed at $2.3 million by the state budget office when a proposal for a convention was introduced in the last legislative session.

Staples noted that while a convention is in session, local and state officials, private organizations, and individual citizens throughout the state necessarily spend a great deal of time and money preparing and presenting their recommendations, and keeping themselves informed on the work of the convention and its committees. This also occurs during subsequent legislative sessions which enact implementing legislation, he said.

A convention today would require costs in terms of meeting facilities not required for the last one, Staples said. Then the legislature met biennially. The convention convened in the House Chamber and used legislators' offices. When the legislature was in session, the convention used Supreme Court facilities. This did not prove satisfactory, Staples said, so the convention provided in the constitution that legislative chambers and facilities be available to future conventions.

With annual sessions, Staples said, an added cost would be, either providing substitute meeting places and offices for legislators displaced by a convention, or possibly providing alternative arrangements, satisfactory to the convention.

The committee exploring the constitutional convention question is composed of members of the Senate Judiciary and House Constitutional Amendments committees. It is headed by Senator Maurice Schechter of Creve Coeur.

Prisoner Flees Hospital Room

POPLAR BLUFF — William Eugene Caudel, 19, of the 900 block of Butler, Poplar Bluff, a Stoddard County prisoner being treated at Doctors Hospital, escaped from the hospital Tuesday afternoon, the Sheriff's Office said.

The Sheriff's office said that Caudel escaped when a guard, a Stoddard County deputy, was called to the telephone by a woman caller who wanted to know the visiting days at the Stoddard County jail.

Caudel was described as 6 - feet tall, 180 pounds, ruddy complexion blue eyes, red hair and was wearing a shite shirt and black pants.

Sheriff Clyde Hendrix said Caudel was taken to the hospital after receiving a stab wound Friday at the Butler County jail. The sheriff said he believed the small stab wound in the abdomen was self - inflicted.

Caudel was being held in the Stoddard County jail on a Check forgery charge until he was brought to the Butler County jail for safekeeping, the Sheriff's Office said.

Stoddard County authorities discovered Thursday morning that two bars had been sawed from the window of the Stoddard County jail.

Sheriff Hendrix said four felony charges had been filed against Caudel in Butler County.

Jail Key Thief Cleared

BY JACK strauss, LL.B.

Sentenced to six months in jail, Rocky quickly developed a negative reaction to being locked up and just as quickly developed a positive plan for getting out. He would start a fight with one of the prison guards, surreptiously life the guard's keys during the melee and then, when no one was looking, walk out of jail.

Unfortunatley for Rocky, however, his plan went slightly amiss. After successfully staging the phony fight, the guard immediatley missed his keys and, finding them under Rocky's mattress, charged him with robbery.

"The guy's a crook," the guard complained in court. "He stole my keys."

"Nonsense," was Rocky's answer. "I didn't steal them. I only borrowed them. He would have gotten them back."

If you were the judge, would you convict freedom-seeking Rocky of robbery?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that robbery requires the intent to permanently deprive someone of his property. And, in this case, the judge noted, it was unlikely that Rocky intended to permanently deprive the guard of his keys. They were of no use to Rocky unless he intended to stay in jail which was highly unlikely. (Based upon a 1950 Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Decision)

America was named for Amerigo Vespucci, an Italian reputed to have made four voyages to the New World (1497-1503). The World Almanac says that Martin Waldseemuller, a German geographer, first used the name to honor Vespucci in a book published in 1507.

The Prayer from The Upper Room

When I sent them far away among the nations and scattered them in many lands, for a while I became their sanctuary in the countries to which they had gone. -- Ezekiel II : 16 (NEB)

PRAYER: O Lord, we thank Thee for a season of rest from daily routines. Help us to use this time to fit ourselves for renewed service, according to Thy will and for Jesus' sake. Amen.

In 1864, President Abraham Lincoln wrote a famous letter of consolation to Mrs. Lydia Bixby pertaining to the death of her five sons in the Civil War. The letter has been described as "a blending of sentiment, uplift and delicate, unaffected sympathy," The World Almanac says.

The ancient Greeks are believed to have been the first to use a combustible material, similar to gunpowder, in warfare. Called Greek fire, the highly inflammable substance was probably composed of naphtha, sulphur and crude sodium or potassium nitrate. The World Almanac says the Greeks first used it in A.D. 673 to repulse an Arab siege of Constantinople.

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tues., Sept. 7, the 250th day of 1971. There are 115 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1822, Brazil declared independence from Portugal.

On this date:

In 1533, Britain's Queen Elizabeth I was born.

In 1812, the French defeated the Russians in the Battle of Borodino southwest of Moscow.

In 1825, the French hero of the American Revolution, the Marquis De Lafayette, said his last farewells to President John Adams at the White House.

In 1930, work began on the Colorado River on Boulder Dam—now the Hoover Dam.

In 1940, German bombers began the World War II raids against London which became known as the London Blitz.

Ten years ago: President John F. Kennedy asked Congress to permit French troops in NATO to be trained in the use of nuclear weapons.

Five years ago: Communist China broke an 11-year silence on talks with the United States at ambassadorial level. Peking charged that Washington and Moscow were "singing a duet" in trying to picture a reconciliation between the United States and China.

One year ago: It was announced that U.S. troop strength in Vietnam had fallen below 400,000 for the first time since early 1967.

Two-Man Hayti Race Contested

HAYTI — Judge J. O. Swink Friday granted an injunction filed by Kennett attorneys on behalf of two Hayti men, assuring that only Mayor Harry Dowdy and ex-Mayor Lee Roy Bain will be the only candidates in a special mayor's election set Sept. 14.

Minutes after the ruling, City Attorney James (Tick) Vickery notified the judge and the attorneys he will petition the Missouri Supreme Court, asking them to prohibit Judge Swink's order.

Attorney Vickery, representing the City of Hayti which will foot the bill for the special election called for Wednesday by Judge William H. Billings after Mayor Dowdy consented to re-meet his defeated opponent, Lee Roy Bain, at the polls, has contended any eligible candidates should be allowed to file for the post, instead of restricting the election to the two men.

Bain and Dowdy were the only candidates for mayor in the April 6 election.

Vickery went before the state's highest court Tuesday on his request. If the court issues a stop order, it will open up the election to any qualified candidate.

The issue arose after Bain, who was contesting in the April election when he was defeated by Dowdy by two votes, and Dowdy appeared in court Wednesday on the contest issue. The case did not go to trial, since the two men agreed to a rematch. Judge Billings ordered the special election, basing his order on a 1945 Missouri Statute which permits another election to determine the winner if both parties agree.

The court order from Swink came after Cable and Welman jointly filed an injuction suit, requesting the court to issue an injunction against the Hayti city clerk, prohibiting him from letting anyone else but Dowdy and Bain file for the election.

New Reading Program For First Graders

HOWARDVILLE — This fall, an estimated 350 first-graders in New Madrid county R-1 schools will begin work with a major new reading program. It could help them increase their reading vocabularies by more than 5,000 words in the first 18 months, Dr. George S. Reuter, Jr., superintendent of schools, announced today.

The program, he explained, is based on a linguistic approach to reading, which allows beginning readers to discover for themselves the pattern and combination of letters that stand for the meaningful sounds of our spoken language.

Drawing on the first-graders' speaking vocabularies, which experts estimate as between 2,500 and 2,600 words, the new reading program is aimed at teaching children to read the words they already understand and use in speech, the superintendent added.

It is designed to eliminate initial reading failure and to develope independent readers from the first lesson by providing an easy transfer from the spoken to the written language.

Nixon Plans Address To Congress Thursday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced today President Nixon will address a joint session of Congress at 12:30 p.m. EDT Thursday on his new economic policies.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler's announcement at the White House came after congressional leaders had made the disclosure on Capitol Hill that Nixon would address Congress.

Nixon met for a little over two hours today with his Cabinet Council on International Economic Policy, with the main focus on U.S. competition in world markets.

Ziegler said there was a good deal of discussion on the necessity for establishing new plants and equipment so that U.S. industry can be more competitive in international trade.

Ziegler said the discussion also included the international monetary situation and trade matters, including the meeting this week in Washington of U.S. and Japanese Cabinet members on economic relations.

Following the President's address, the House and Senate will remain in the House chamber for a reception for the three Apollo 15 astronauts.

The congressional leaders made their report while Nixon met with top advisers on international economic policy. A high-level Japanese delegation is due in town later in the week to discuss trade problems.

No agenda was announced for the meeting, but there was speculation the discussions would center on the upcoming talks.

Among those scheduled to attend today's meeting were Treasury Secretary John B. Connally; Secretary of State William P. Rogers; Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird; Director George Shultz of the Office of Management and Budget; Chairman Paul McCracken of the President's Council of Economic Advisers; Ambassador Carl J. Gilbert, Nixon's special trade representative; and Ambassador-at-Large David M. Kennedy, former secretary of the Treasury.

Connally and Rogers will be the leading U.S. participants in discussions Thursday and Friday marking the annual U.S.Japanese meeting of cabinet ministers on trade and economic affairs.

The Japanese ministers are expected to push for repeal of restrictions on the sale of Japanese products in the United States, including a 10-per-cent surtax on imports imposed Aug. 15 by President Nixon as part of a sweeping new policy designed to curb inflation and protect the dollar.

In his Labor Day message Monday, broadcast nationwide on radio, Nixon praised the American competitive spirit and urged work toward "a goal we have rarely been able to achieve in the past 40 years—a new prosperity without war and without inflation."

In another development, AFL-CIO President George Meany said he would agree to a no-strike pledge if labor is given a voice in deciding what follows the wage-price freeze.

Airliner In Small Pieces

Fifty-Six Bodies Found

"We've got a lot of rain, low clouds and wind, and those people on the hill are taking a beating," an official said of rescuers who were to continue today to remove the bodies of 111 victims from the mountain.

"We've got that airplane scattered up and down a hillside for about 1,500 feet," added the official, Patrick Wellington, deputy commissioner of the Alaska Public Safety Department.

By late Monday rescuers had recovered 56 bodies and the flight recorders from the scene where the Alaska Airlines 727 jet crashed Saturday in the nation's worst single-aircraft disaster.

The bodies and debris were scattered throughout three parallel depressions 2,500 feet up 3,500-foot Mt. Chilkat.

As the bodies labeled with marking pencils for identification and airlifted by helicopter to Juneau, where a temporary morgue has been set up in a National Guard armory.

Recovery workers moved through fist-sized chunks of metal, paper and clothing searching for the remains of victims Monday as three private helicopters and one Coast Guard craft moved over the area, ferrying supplies to the rescue party.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators began charting the location of every piece of debris in an attempt to determine the chain of events before and during the crash.

The two recorders found Monday were to be flown to Seattle today. The voice recorder will be read there. The flight recorder will be forwarded to a laboratory in Washington, D.C.

Officials still could give no indication as to what caused the crash.

The airliner was en route from Yakutu and was on its final approach to Juneau Municipal Airport when it hit the ridge about 1,000 feet below the top of the mountain.

Federal Aviation Administration regulations require incoming planes to maintain at least a 6,500-foot altitude at that point.

Vandals Set Tree House Afire

Vandalism was the apparent cause of a tree house fire Sunday night, reports Fire Chief Dolph Webb.

Webb said firemen were called to 1027 North Kingshighway at 11 p.m. Sunday when Bernare Rice reproted the fire. The tree house, at the rear of the Rice home was destroyed.

A second fire report at 3:40 p.m. Monday sent firemen to 310 Marion to extinguish a small shrubbery fire at the Jim Smith home. Webb said apparently windblown burning trash had spread to the shrubbery and a small tree.

Festival Brawl

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A rock festival erupted Monday night into a brawl among motorcyclists, Mexican-American youths and surfers fighting with knives, chains, clubs and bottles. One cyclist was killed and several other persons were injured.

The outbreak lasted for more than an hour before being broken up by state highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and police who sealed off the area where 3,000 youths had been listening to the all-day rock concert Monday.

About 150 persons were rounded up by officers for questioning, but none was immediately booked, authorities said.

Most of the injured were taken to Watsonville Community Hospital, about six miles south of the festival's site in a pasture near a lake. Hospital spokesmen said a motorcyclist identified as Peter Michael Montera, 26, Long Beach, Calif., died of stab wounds. Two other motorcyclists, Bruce Miller, 31, Long Beach, and Jasper Turco, 24, San Jose, Calif., were reported in good condition after surgery.

Authorities said the trouble occurred just as the festival was breaking up.

Witnesses said 19 members of a motorcycle club from San Jose arrived at the previously calm festival and clashed with a group of Mexican-American youths. And the fight was joined by surfers from beaches near Watsonville, about 75 miles south of San Francisco.

It was the second straight day that motorcyclists were involved in violence in California. On Sunday a motorcyclist and a tavern keeper were wounded in a shootout in the seaside resort town of Jenner, 60 miles north of San Francisco, after an argument over service.

Jenner was guarded by police and highway patrolmen Monday after a purported spokesman for some 200 motorcyclist vowed to "tear up this town" in retaliation for the shooting.

The cyclists involved in the Watsonville brawl were of a different gang than the one in Jenner, authorities said.

Damico Refuses Detector Test

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — A 25year-old St. Louis County man remained in custody today following identification of a woman's body found in a wooded area as that of a suburban St. Louis housewife missing since Aug. 16.

County authorities said Anthony P. Damico has refused through his attorney to take a lie detector test in the death of Mrs. Lawrence Lucas, 36.

The decomposed body of the attractive woman was identified Monday by Dr. George E. Gantner, county medical examiner, from dental records.

Gantner said Mrs. Lucas died from a heavy blow to the head administered by a blunt instrument. She suffered a fractured skull and broken jaw.

The body was accidentally discovered Sunday night in an area near Babler State Park in west St. Louis County.

The highway patrol and county authorities maintained a vigil over the body until daybreak Monday, then sifted through weeds and dirt in the vicinity for evidence.

Damico, who served 13 months of a three-year sentence for armed robbery in 1966, was charged with interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle after he was found sleeping in Mrs. Lucas' car near Panama City Beach, Fla., Aug. 27.

He told authorities he had accompanied Mrs. Lucas, the mother of daughters 12 and 16, to Memphis, Tenn., with three other men, then left the group for Florida.

Damico was also charged with fraudulent use of Mrs. Lucas' credit card for purchase of a radio at St. Charles, Mo., the afternoon of her disappearance.

Mrs. Lucas had not been seen since a shopping excursion. She had failed to keep an appointment to meet her younger daughter at a riding stable near where her body was found.

MEMO TO 18-YEAR OLDS:
HONOR THE VOTE

Now that the 18-year-olds have the Constitutional right to vote, some political forces are making a concerted effort to channel the young people's thinking in one direction — left-liberal. And many persons believe that may be fairly easy to do, because it is felt that voters of such a tender age will naturally be idealistic, desirous of change, unafraid and therefore not backward-looking but facing into the future with hope and great sincerity.

That is a description of millions of young persons, but it does not mean that they will pitch headlong into the unknown politics. The liberal- radicals who believe that the votes of the 18-, 19- and 20-year olds are all sewed up may be in for a big surprise. Children take many of their habits and customs from their parents, despite the supposed enormous generation gap of our day.

A few years ago the 18-year-olds received the vote in Scotland, and, to everyone's surprise, more conservatives than ever were elected to public office. With the 18-year-olds voting in the general British elections in June of 1970, the Conservatives were returned to power over the Laborites, who had ruled for six years. So the political gap between the generations may be over-estimated. There is no reason to believe that Americans youths will opt for chaos, which may be the alternative to measured change. We ask them to honor the vote with their best thinking.

COFFEE BREAKS

Coffee breaks could well be the straw that breaks the camel's back as far as the economic well being of a small firm is concerned.

Management experts have come up with some interesting figures on the matter of coffee slurping. Based on the minimum federal wage of only $1.60 an hour, the experts found that if a firm has 10 employes and they each lose five minutes a day, the cost is $680 a year.

Fifteen minutes lost a day costs the same firm more than $2,000 a year for work not done.

If the average salary figures out at $2.75 an hour, 15 minutes lost a day from 10 employes costs more than $3,500 a year.

The present economic instability of the U.S. indicated the time has come for employer and employe aloke to provide a day's work for a day's pay and with quality production included.

PEACEFUL ATOM

The growth of nuclear power is a worldwide, not just an American, phenomenon. There are more than 80 operating nuclear plants in the world, only 22 of them in the United States. Authorities predict there will be more than 250 operating nuclear plants throughout the world by the end of the decade. And that's just the beginning. Unless technology comes up with an alternative, it appears that atomic energy will become the world's primary source of power.

The implications of this growth add importance to the fourth meeting on nuclear power sponsored by the United Nations' International Atomic Energy Agency. The 10-day meeting beginning on Monday, Sept. 6 in Geneva will explore such topics as the world energy demand by the year 2000, nuclear plant operating methods, health and safety -- plus a host of related issues. It can be predicted in advance that not all the scientists will agree that nuclear power is perfectly healthy and completely safe.

According to critics, nuclear power plants heat up waterways, emit radiation and have the potential -- through a freak accident -- of causing death and destruction. Proponents reply that, at least in the United States, there has never been a loss of life or property damage in 14 years of operating experience. What radiation escapes from nuclear reactors is only a tiny fraction of the radiation we constantly receive from the sun, the earth and food. Nuclear plants, they add, are equipped with backup safety features and failsafe systems which shut a reactor down at the first hint of trouble.

This is an over-simplification of the atomic debate. In Geneva, the scientists will argue about millirems of radiation exposure, esoteric design critera, complicated statistical computations and probably mathematics. In this rarified atmosphere, the general public -- which has the most to gain and lose from nuclear power -- finds itself in the hands of its scientists. It doesn't help matters when the scientists disagree as they so frequently do about the pros and cons of nuclear power.

THE POLITICAL PLAGUE

After listening to the Ralph Naders and others of his ilk belabor the business and industrial leadership of America and their products, we read with interest what Dr. George P. Loweke had to say in his book, "The Political Plague of America."

Dr. Loweke comments: "We aim to cultivate great men, but not in the field of economic independence. We are bringing up a nation of dependents. Everyone today must always be subordinated to the placemen. Knowledge is power, but this is true only in the exercise of knowledge. The exploitation of knowledge from those who have it, under the power of those who do not have it, can only be done to a degree and then under oppressive conditions. This is another one of the factors that is stalling progress in the country."

Dr. Loweke believes that people are not doing their best any more under the present specious freedom system of this country, which formerly provided a minimum of restrictions. The greatness of men than came out, each in his own way. The country in turn benefitted from the exercise of the rarest wisdom of these men, which is not now used to the fullest, because these organizational geniuses are not given a free-hand to operate, lest it be to their own advantage. The dominant powers are all in government, exercised by politicians who are not creators for the general good. Business genius is thwarted and the nation is handicapped. Under stable conditions in the world such an experiment might not be so disastrous. There are times a nation could founder under reckless administration and not be irreparably weakened.

This is exactly the risk that has been taken by recent administrations in Washington, who became reckless with the unchallenged leadership of America in world affairs. American leadership was taken for granted. But the advancing state of world science brought about a change unsuspected by politicians.

Without the scientific advance of Russia our position would still not be threatened despite the error of our ways. Under our present degree of socialism this country might still not have its leadership challenged in the world. The embarrassment of having run a tie race for first place internationally, as a result of scientific advancement, is a twist thoughtless statesmen never considered. The country is now confronted with the challenge of regaining our national stature by reexcelling in science ... and by industrial invention and modernized production.

Dr. Loweke says that politicians will never again allow, if they can prevent it, science and technology to attain unbridled status of these domains held formerly under the reign of capitalism. Almost without exception some lesser qualified bureaucrat, than the scientists working under him, heads every research project, even in industry. Scientists cannot do their best work this way.

Everyone likes to feel he is boss of his destiny, not just the bureaucratic administrators. But some men wish to earn it in their own right, without obligation to demagogues. Such individuals are more worthy than those appointed and annointed persons by our ruling politicians.

Under the free market place and private enterprise this is possible, under bureaucracy this privilege to make oneself what one wishes is denied. It becomes rather a matter of making of oneself what others wish.

WELFARE MONSTROSITY

There can be no more convincing evidence of the need for drastic curbs of the nation's rapidly growing welfare system than a look at the record of the last 10 years.

Since 1961 the number of persons on relief in the United States has doubled — from 7.2 million to about 14.4 million. The burden on taxpayers has quadrupled — with costs shooting up from 4.3 billion a year to nearly $17 billion.

Nor does the end appear in sight if the present trend continues unchecked. In a comprehensive analysis of spiraling welfare programs by U.S. News & World Report, it is estimated that costs could climb another $4 billion by next year.

Hardest hit by the welfare "bonanza" have been the most populous states with dense urban areas. In New York, for example, the public assistance budget has skyrocketed more than 900 per cent voer the last decade — from almost $354 million in 1961 to more than $3.5 billion this year!

California welfare rolls have grown nearly 470 per cent in that period, with taxpayers now shelling out more than $2.8 billion annually compared to about $496 million 10 years ago. Pennsylvania now budgets more than $1 billion a year for reliefers, an increase of 450 per cent over the 1961 figure of about $189 million.

Illinois is not far behind, with annual welfare costs of around $1 billion, up about 320 per cent over the $236 million spent just 10 years ago. Massachusetts, the tenth - largest state in terms of population, puts out nearly $828 million for welfare every year, a whopping 430 per cent jump above the $156 million budgeted in 1961.

These are only the most extreme examples. Public assistance costs are up substantially in virtually every section of the United States. Even sparsely populated Alaska and Wyoming showed marked increases in welfare spending during the 1961-71 period.

Although the heaviest burden is in the nation's cities — where in some cases about one of every seven residents is on relief — taxpayers throughout the land are beginning to bend under the load. And beginning to protest.

They are tired of the widespread abuses of programs designed basically to help those genuinely in need, are weary of supporting those who can trace their welfare dependency back several generations.

They are fed up with the cheaters who, by fraudulent practices, dupe the government out of tax money sorely needed for other purposes.

There are firm indications government officials finally are getting the message. Long - overdue reforms are being initiated to rein in the galloping costs of public welfare.

Legislation is pending in Congress to overhaul the nation's out -of -whack welfare machinery, but a more encouraging sign is that a growing number of state administrations seem determined to do something about controlling their runaway welfare systems.

Illinois Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, citing an unexpected growth in welfare rolls, recently announced payments would be cut if the state ran out of funds already budgeted for welfare benefits. Ogilvie also is pushing for tightened work requirements for welfare recipients.

He has endorsed a one - year residency requirement for obtaining public aid, passed in the last session of the General Assembly. Other states where one - year residency bills are pending include Ohio, Michigan and wisconsin.

California Gov. Ronald Reagan has adopted a "get - tough" attitude toward welfare, calling for reform measures to set rigid ceilings on spending and stricter work standards.

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller got major legislative changes to reduce the welfare load, including a requirement that employable welfare recipients go to work or lose their benefits. A one - year residencyrule also was enacted, with enforcement being held up by a court challenge.

Millions of Americans are in genuine need. They deserve public assistance. but the professional loafers and the cheaters who have been riding the welfare boom must be weeded out if the system is to work as intended. The alternative is economic disaster.

PRE-BUILT HOUSING PLANNED IN VIRGINIA

Factory - finished modules for town houses and garden - type apartments will roll off the assembly lines of the Urban Systems Development Corporation plant in Fredericksburg, Va., by the end of the year.

The plant is expected to produce 700 dwelling units next year, with the maximum output of 1,400 at the 68,000-square - foot facility by 1973.

USDC's goal, according to President Rex Garrett, "will be to produce housing as good as or better than conventionally built homes and at lower cost. In appearance, the modular home will look exactly like a conventionally built unit."

BILLIONS DOWN THE DRAIN

It has been said down through the years that you can't buy friendship. The United States is learning the truth of the old saying through its give- away economic aid plan to other nations. The government put charity with tax dollars-- yours and mine -- on a formidable basis at the conslusion of World War II with the ostensible purpose of rehabilitation of the world ecomony and the prevention of a take - over of the recipient nations by communism. Here is the official record of what has happened in some cases:

France -- $9.5 billion in economic, arms aid. France pulled out of NATO.

India -- $8.7 billion in economic aid. India has signed a friendship treaty with Russia.

Chile -- $1.6 billion in economic aid. Chile is now Marxist, chasing out U.S. companies.

Our global position at the end of the war was powerful, extensive and should have offered world leadership by true statesmen. But instead of relying on the tested and success -producing formula of diplomacy, we went into the handout business which neither gained us friends nor prevented the spread of the worst kind of plague in history,communism We are now fighting for our economic lives, the fight being in part due to intolerable foreign trade imbalance which has seen our imports exceed our exports. Our tax dollars, given away as foreign aid, have launched powerful economic forces abroad which are out-producing and outselling us. Our give - away of billions did not hold together the alliances on which we counted for defesive shields. Now we are paying a heavy price.

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON-- For protection against dishonest businessmen, consumers still rely upon the 142 local Better Business Bureaus more than any other source. Yet these prestigious agencies often put out misinformation intended more to protect the companies than their customers.

This is the startling conclusion of Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., after an intensive, three-month study. He assigned several young sleuths to investigate BBBs across the country. Their findings are summed up in an 88-page report, still indraft form.

Here are excerpts from a bootleg copy:

"Checking with BBB is useless and possibly has a negative effect for the consumer, " charges the Rosenthal report, "because their information is inaccurate and favors member companies."

BBBs are self-protection devices for business, whose shady and shoddy dealings are often concealed from the public, the report also alleges. "One must not lose sight that BBB efforts on behalf of the consumer exist to forestall government activity." Many of the "successes" that the BBBs have chalked up, says the report, are really refusals of stores to make adjustments .

The report claims that BBBs have chalked up, says the report, are really refusals of stores to make adjustments.

The report claims that BBBs give "fraudulent businesses an aura of respectability-....Even wholly illegitimate firms" can fool the BBBs. Rosenthal's investigation "indicated that firms, even though adjudicated frauds....have continued their BBB membership." Many BBBs in the survey hadn't expelled a member in more than a year, others had expelled only one.

UNDERCOVER CUSTOMERS

The Congressman's sleuths, as one technique, posed as customers and asked the BBBs about firms that had been subjects of government action.

A number of Holiday Health Spas, for instance, were accused by the Federal Trade Commission of falsely advertising they could add years to the life span of members, prevent heart attacks and produce other health miracles. The parent organization signed a "consent" order agreeing to abide by the law.

Yet Rosenthal's gumshoes were told by BBBs merely that the Holiday Spas "always adjusted" problems. No mention was made of the FTC action.

Several Arthur Murray Dance studios were accused by the FTC of conducting a land-office business in phony contracts. In one case cited by the FTC, a 62-year-old woman was pushed into signing an $8,200 contract while she still had 300 hours of dance instruction coming. Although these cases chiefly involved previous studio owners, complaints are still coming in.

The BBBs told the congressional undercover customers absolutely nothing of this sordid history, saying only that they had received "no complaints for the last three years."

We have confirmed Rosenthal's findings independently in the Washington area. We inquired about AAMCO Automatic Transmissions. The FTC has brought formal charges against the company for scandalously bilking the public. Yet the Washington Better Business Bureau claimed to have no knowledge of any government action against AAMCO and told us encouragingly: "I don't think you'll have any trouble."

The Better Business Bureau in each community is supported by local businesses. This would seem to constitute an insurmountable conflict of interest.

PROTECTING SHADY FIRMS

The Rosentahl report tells of a dedicated BBB worker who got excellent results for consumers by threatening shady firms with lawsuits. But the companies complained, and he had to back off. His "success rate" has now dropped from 75 to 25 per cent.

Another BBB official reported some dishonest dealings to the FTC. "At the next BBB board of directors meeting," declares the report, "the representative of that company (a big contributor to BBB) stood up and suggested that industry should keep its squabbles out of the public sphere." The BBB official backed down The report cites still another member company who "was convicted of all counts of a multi-count indictment" for holding furniture hostage and committing other criminal offenses. No mention was made of this to Rosenthal's man. But when he asked about a nonmember company, the BBB confided that the company had been under investigation "by the district attorney."

Rosenthal's investigators also talked with ten buyers whose complaints according to the BBBs , had been completely resolved. Seven said they had not been helped at all.

Rosenthal also canvassed 31 consumer organizations by mail, asking their opinion of the Better Business Bureaus. Three sent in praise, three replies were vague. The remaining 25 responses claimed, in varying degrees, that the BBBs were hopeless.

The Council, which represents all 142 BBBs, told us their internal checks had turned up "reporting deficiencies" similar to those described by Rosenthal. John O'Brien, the council's vice president, said that a new management team is running the organization now, "and it's an entirely new ball game." He said a multi-million dollar program has been initiated to upgrade the BBBs, and almost $500,000 ingrants already have been made to beef up BBB service to consumers.

Footnote: The Rosethal report charges that the BBBs, although they represent commercial firms, are able to get free radio—TV time the same as the Red Cross of American Cancer Society. At least one Better Business Bureau is drawing federal aid. The report concedes that "BBB provides some good information on the fly-by - night operator', but not enough to justify free air time.

by Victor Riesel

WASHINGTON: There are those in considerably influential circles who would have the nation believe that supporting the Subversive activities Control Board is akin to bottling the bubonic plague and hawking it as political patent medicine. This is unfortunate. There are thousands of explosive reasons for the continued financing of the Board, for its staffing and for giving its hearings a fair hearing.

There is, for example, the lethal matter of bombings brought to mind by the Aug. 31 (1971) indictment of four men on charges of murdering one Robety Fassnacht. He was blown to bits Aug. 24, 1970, just about a year ago, while in the pursuit of knowledge in the U.S. Army Mathematics Research Center, U. Of Wisconsin in Madison. The four men, charged inabsentia, are being tracked by the FBI.

It is tragic that the late physicist Fassnacht, and four others badly hurt when he was killed, should become statistics. It also is tragic that the dead- liness at Kent State U. should become a cause celebre and scholar Fassnacht should be almost completely forgotten. For the moment the statistics are the thing.

As the universities' lights go on all over the nation these days, authorities in Washington report that since January 1969 more than 51 federal buildings have been bombed. The General Services Administration probably has a bigger figure. In all there have been well over 6,500 bombings since the count began three Januarys ago. At least 55 persons have been killed, including of course, the apolitical mathematician Fassnacht. Mixed with this blood is money, if it's of consequence. Lots of money in damages--well over $30 million.

When last I talked with representatives of the California Bankers Assn., for example, I was told that the Bank of America has been "targeted." It had been hit at least 30 times by early summer. In one two-week period it was hit 10 times.

The cost then was $1.5 million – and the computer specialists were estimating this to hike to $3.5 million.

And from January 1969, bombs have hit many a corporate building, oil refineries, communication towers, a telephone exchange, power poles, rail tracks, police transmitters, stationhouses and vehicles.

At one point the authorities were able to place definitive responsibility for 36 per cent of the bombings. The other 64 per cent are still to be solved. But the scientific analyses are grimly fascinating-- especially should they be to the Congressmen who, for reasons they really never explained fully fought the Subversive Activities Control Board as though it were chaired by Emperor Caligual.

Of the bombings definitely traced by the Treasury Dept. for the period January 1969 to April 15, 1970: some 56 percent were attributed to campus disorders (such as the one in which theorist Fassnacht was killed later); 19 per cent were set by black extremists; 14 per cent by white extremists: 2 per cent in labor disputes; 1 per cent to attacks on religious instituions; and 8 per cent "in aid of criminal activites (re.Extortion, theft, arson for insurance)."

The mob's the mob and it is being electronically pursued. But what of the black and white extremists? What of the revolutionary units? What of the weird, independent "armies", liberation fronts, and violent, secret societies? If these aren't lethally subversive, if the bombing of oil refineries, the derailment of trains, the infiltration of hugh factories by cells which dispatch "delegations" to Hanoi, the targeting of banks to disrupt the credit system and the brutal political executions of policemen are are not subversive-- what is?

And what of the 16 missing SDS Weatherman (and women)? What of the types such as Kathy Boudin and Cathy Wilkerson, the young women, their clothes blasted off, in their own New York City bomb factory, who dashed into the streets nude, and escaped? What of other bomb factories? What of the Weathermen Bureau leaders such as Mark Rudd whose storm trooper squads first seized parts of Columbia University some years ago (during which one police officer was injured and paralyzed)?

What of the bands who were indicted on charges of disrupting parts of Chicago and Detroit and now are fugitives from the FBI which wants them for violation of the Federal laws on conspiracy, Federal bomb and gun-control laws, as well as the anti-rioting andmob action statutes?

Where is the self-avowed terrorist Bernardine Dohrn, who was active in and around Kent State U. as well as other storm centers? She has admitted being part of the national home - bomb factory complex.

Certainly there are subversives? If the Bernardine Dohrns, the Mark Rudds, the Armstrong brothers (of theFassnacht murder charges) are not subversive, then let's throw away the word. Let those who mock the board stand and mock the widows of those killed, and the families of those maimed, and the millions on millions of undergraduates who simply want basic learning, not bombs.

Reunification Termed Only Way To Lasting Peace In N. Ireland

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic declared after a meeting with Prime Minister Edward Heath today that reunification of Ireland is the only way to bring permanent peace in Northern Ireland.

Heath and Lynch conferred for two days on ways of finding a solution to the two years of civil strife in Ulster, Northern Ireland's official name.

Lynch described his talks with Heath—who has the overall say in running the British province—as "merely an examination in depth of the situation."

No firm decisions were reached.

The meeting between the two leaders came with no real letup in the rioting, shooting and bombing in Ulster that has claimed 100 lives-including children and British soldiers.

Lynch has come under fire of the outlawed Irish Republican Army—IRA—which is dedicated to unification of Ireland by any means, including force.

The Irish leader, regarded as a moderate, goes along with the unification tradition that dates 50 years in IRA history but wants to achieve unity by peaceful means.

Lynch's comment that reunification is the only way to bring a lasting solution of the Irish question means that steps must be taken now to give the Roman Catholics more say in government in the north.

The soft-spoken leader of the Irish Republic said he would meet with Heath again. They have another date in October.

From the beginning there was no hope of any firm decisions with the absence of the Northern Ireland's prime minister, Brian Faulkner.

Health's next move is obviously to confer with Faulkner on what steps the London government will take.

The talks raised a cautious air of optimism in London. The summit was not expected to lead to any dramatic moves to settle the conflict in Northern Ireland, but could create an atmosphere for more moderation.

The first session was described by officials as "relaxed, friendly and businesslike."

As the two leaders adjourned their talks for the night, word came that Northern Ireland's two-year death toll climbed to 100 with the shooting of 14-yearold Annette McGavigan in Londonderry's Roman Catholic Bogside quarter.

Annette was licking a lollipop and talking with friends as they sat on a garden wall when a gun battle blazed between British troops and hidden gunmen. Annette was struck in the head by a bullet. She was given last rites by a Catholic priest as her friends wailed in terror.

The British army said its troops shot back only at individual snipers and no one else was in the line of fire during the exchange. But a spokesman did not discount the possibility that a ricocheting military bullet may have hit the girl.

After the shooting, crowds gathered and hurled petrol bombs and stones at troops. One soldier was wounded but the district later was reported quiet.

As Lynch arrived at the Irish Embassy here to spend the night, fighting erupted between police and demonstrators. Police helmets fell to the ground during fist fights as demonstrators charged Lynch's car, shouting "No sellout, Jack. No sellout." There were countercries of "Fascist" as Lynch backed into his car until police fought off the crowd.

Scotland Yard said nine policemen were injured and three demonstrators were arrested. A spokesman for one group picketing the embassy said they were protesting Northern Ireland's internment without trial of more than 200 alleged Irish Republic Army —IRA— activists.

Congress To Find Agenda Revised On Return To Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returns this week after a month's vacation to find its agenda rewritten by President Nixon—his "new American revolution" replaced by his new economic policy.

When the congressional recess began Aug. 6, Nixon was pushing welfare reform and revenue sharing as the centerpieces of the program he outlined in his State of the Union message last January.

But the President, faced with a steadily worsening economy, shifted gears Aug. 15. He called for passage of a tax package, froze wages, prices and rents for 90 days and took action to stabilize the dollar.

And he asked Congress to delay the effective dates of his welfare-reform and revenuesharing plans to hold down federal spending and allow prompt consideration of his economic program.

Cambodian Terrorists Fail In Bid To Kill U.S. Ambassador

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) – Terrorists made an unsuccessful bid to kill the U.S. Ambassador to Cambodia, Emory C. Swank, by pushing a bomb- laden bicycle out of an alleyway as he sped past in his car on his way to work, embassy officials reported today.

Swank was unharmed and an embassy spokesman said the ambassador was not aware until several hours after the incident that an assassination attempt had been made.

The riderless bicycle bumped gently against Swank's car as it rolled out into the roadway, the official said.

A Cambodian security gurad, Sgt. Yim Sarun, accompanied the ambassador on the half-mile journey from his residence and later sent police back to investigage the bicycle, which was found to have a plastic explosive charge attached to the handlebars, the spokesman said.

He added that the incident occurred around 7:30 a.m. but that the ambassador was not informed of the assassination attempt until midmorning.

The spokesman said the plastic bomb weighed 10 to 20 pounds.

Cambodian police sources said they were seeking a youth about 18 who was seen pushing the bicycle out of an alleyway into the path of the ambassador's limousine.

Cambodian police took charge of the investigation. They said the youth, who appeared to be alone, ran off as soon as he pushed the bicycle about 10 feet into the path of the car.

The sources said a pressure -type detonator had been attached to the bomb and it was set to explode on contact with the car.

Swank, 49, and married, entered the diplomatic service in 1946. He has served in Shanghai, Tsingtao, Batavia, Jakarta, Moscow, Bucharest and Vientiane. He is a native of Frederick, Md.

In April, another terrorist bomb that failed to explode was contained in a school bag thrown from a passing motorcycle at an American Embassy car waiting to pick up a passenger.

Simultaneous attacks were made June 1 on a Marine guard residence and quarters for members of the U.S. military equipment delivery team. Two Americans were injured in these attacks.

Governor Nominee's Nephew Missing In K.C.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — John Holmes, the 18-year-old nephew of Mississippi Democratic gubernatorial nominee Bill Waller, has been missing in Kansas City since Aug. 28, it was disclosed Monday night.

Holmes, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Holmes of Jackson, Miss., was one of several Mississippi State University students who came to Kansas City in June to sell books door-to-door for the Southwestern Book Co. Holmes and David Goss, another salesman rented an apartment.

The Kansas City Times said in its Tuesday editions that Holmes was dropped off at an intersection in the city on the day of his disappearance by Eddie Richardson, 21, Jackson, Tenn., another company employe. Richardson told Holmes to meet him at the same location at 9 p.m. to be picked up.

The newspaper said Richardson contacted police but could not supply them with enough information to make a search worthwhile. Rather than alarm the boy's parents, the other boys decided to wait several days to see if Holmes showed up.

Richardson called Holmes's parents Aug. 31 in Jackson to notify them, and his father came to Kansas City two days later. He has hired a detective agency to search for his son, the Times said.

The Times quoted the boy's father as saying:

"He left his car in the apartment lot and all his clothes and belongings in the apartment. Disappearing like this is very uncharacteristic of him. He was just rarin' to get started at Mississippi State this fall."

Holmes said his son had been beaten and robbed several times while engaged in door-todoor selling.

"We don't know if he's lost his memory or run away or even if he's still alive," the father said.

Puerto Rican Leftists Plot Anti-American Demonstration

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — Puerto Rico's leftist separatists are agitating for a massive anti-American demonstration to coincide with the opening of the national governors' conference in San Juan next Sunday.

The activists are predicting a turnout of 15,000 at a rally and protest march and are counting on hundreds of journalists from the mainland to report back the demonstrators' allegations of c lonialism and exploitation by the United States.

"They will seek to have our police overreact," said one island leader. "They all remember what happened to Chicago's image during the Democratic convention" in 1968.

Rumors that 100 U.S.-owned businesses will be sabotaged during the four-day conference have shaken the business community and various business groups have held secret talks to work out precautions.

All police and fire department leaves have been canceled during the conference.

Although indpendence seekers are believed to number less than 100,000 out of a total island population of 2.7 million, their militant zeal belies their small number. In the last election, separatists failed to poll 3 per cent of the vote, although some separatists groups boycott elections as a matter of policy.

A leaflet handed out by the organizers of the "National Day of Protest" on Sunday says: "There will be newsmen from around the world at the conference and they will carry our protest to all countries."

Authorities say there will be room for reasonable picketing, but they are bracing themselves for intense provocations.

One U.S.-owned plant is closing all but two entrances to its sprawling premises and will allow only personnel with special identification cards to enter the building. Messengers, delivery men and others will have to remain outside.

One businessman said that "although rumors to the effect that 100 industries will be bombed sounds grotesque, we are doing all in our power to safeguard probable targets."

Sporadically over the past months, terrorists belonging to outlawed "Independentists"—separatist—gangs have firebombed stores owned by Americans and Cubans or with American-sounding names.

Ann Landers

Grandmother Feels She Has Done Her Duty

Dear Ann Landers: You are a sworn enemy of every person in this country over 55 years of age. Why? Because you keep telling people they can maintain active sex lives into the sixties and seventies and even the eighties.

Well, maybe a few oddballs and bedroom acrobats can, but most normal people are glad to be through with sex when they reach the late 50's. Especially the women.

You also fail to take into account that some people just don't happen to consider carnal knowledge an important part of their lives, even when they are young. They enjoy members of the opposite sex--there is respect, companionship and intellectual stimulation, but no burning desire to get physical.

People like you who promote and glamorize sex for elderly folks do a great deal of harm. As a mother of seven children, 31 grandchildren and seven- great-grandchildren I feel I have earned my rest and I don't need you to tell me I am over the hill.--Done My Duty.

Dear Done: I was not aware that I've been "touting and glamorizing" sex for members of the Social Security set. I have, however, said repeatedly, that it is possible for couples to remain sexually active in their 70's and even 80's and that such activity is neither unhealthy, immoral nor obscene.

A woman, no matter what her age, who says she has earned her "rest" suggests that sex was "work". And herein lies your problem, Ma'am.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I did something this summer we've been wanting to do for 15 years. We took a cross-country car trip from Maine to California. We saw and learned a lot. The most disturbing part of our trip was the realization that a large number of people don't care about their pets.

We counted five dead dogs who had been struck by cars and 11 lost dogs some of them with bleeding paws, trotting along the road. One little mutt was so exhaused we stopped and took him to the next service station, gave him some cool water and called the local humane society. If we hadn't come along he surely would have died. It was 104 degrees in Oklahom City that day.

The first thing people can do is not let their dogs run loose. The second thing is to put identification tags around the dogs' necks. It would improve the chances of the rightful owners getting them back. My secret hunch is that these folks don't really care about their pets or they would not be running loose on the highways.---Witness to Sad Scene

Dear Wit: Thank you for letting us see a bit of the country through your eyes. I agree, the scene is a sad one and I thank you for describing it.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice stank again. I refer to the 20-year mistress of the married man. She said she had given him the only love he had ever known and now that he had suffered two coronaries she was wondering about her rightful place at the funeral if he should die. The woman wrote a very poignant letter. She said that after 20 years of devotion she was entitled to some status. You told her (in your usual cold -blooded way) that in our cultural setup, a married man's mistress has not status --his wife gets it all.

Don't you see how rotten and unfair this is? Open your eyes and start to give some decent advice. Or quit. --- Hal's True Love

Dear Love: It may be unfair, but I believe in telling it like it is. and this is the way it is.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What't wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts. ," enclosing with your request 35 cemts oin coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Campbell Calls Back Second Batch Of Soup

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Campbell Soup Co. has ordered 53,280 cans of vegetarian vegetable soup from its Paris, Tex., plant recalled.

It was the second batch of soup from the same plant recalled within 10 days.

The firm described the new recall Tuesday as a precautionary measure.

The Food and Drug Administration said tests on the vegetarian vegetable found a bacteria that could only exist under conditions similar to those required by the organism that produces the deadly poison botulin. Bacteria are normally killed by high-heat processing.

Botulin was found Aug. 21 in part of a 200,000-can batch of Campbell's chicken vegetable sop. The FDA said further tests for botulin were being conducted on the vegetarian vegetable soup.

A company spokesman said no deaths or illness had been reported connected to either of the soups.

The vegetarian vegetable soup was piacked last July 2 and shipped to wholesalers in Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Louisiana, Missouri, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kansas and Texas.

Florida officials announced today they had found 13 of the cans in the Pensacola area as part of an inspection program in 15 northwest Florida counties near the Alabama border.

The soup ordered recalled Tuesday bears the identifying code 15-CT-7B1X.

The FDA said the tests were ordered when several cans from the batch were found to contain soup that had spoiled.

Watch The Rush

Big Red Preview

ST. LOUIS AP — The St. Louis Cardinals' Bob Hollway has ideas on "big plays" in football, and a major percentage revolves around defense.

Thus the Cardinals' new head coach, installed in February, is more concerned about pass rush than rushing prior to the National Football League season but two weeks away.

Hollway, four-season drill instructor for the Minnesota Vikings' famed Purple People-Eaters under Bud Grant, comes by his attitudes naturally.

"When the Vikings won the NFL title in 1969 we had just as many points resulting from the 'big play' on defense as we did the big play on offense," he says.

"On defense you've always got to be on the attack, forcing the other team to make mistakes. Offense is inconsistent. The defense, if it's secure, will keep you in every game."

In remolding a basically stout Cardinals defense thin only at linebacking, his early anxieties have been lack of pressure on opposing quarterbacks in three preseason games and dropped passes, both offensively and defensively.

"A lot of pass rush may be raw, natural ability and it seems that the only player we have with the ability to be a great rusher is Ron Yankowski," Hollway remarks.

In referring to Yankowski, a 6-foot-5, 225-pound rookie defensive end Hollway hinted changes could occur in a front four last year consisting of Rolf Krueger, Bob Rowe, Fred Heron and Chuck Walker, all of whom are back.

Hollway inherited a club which he concedes "has championship potential" and "the potential to go all the way offensively on any play." The Cards, after a strong beginning in 1970, faltered and finished 8-5 1, third in the National Conference East.

Departments Hollway considers strong and stable include the defensive secondary-which consists of cornerbacks Roger Urhrli and Miller Farr and safeties Larry Wilson and Jerry Stovall-the receiving and the running.

Tank-like MacArthur Lane busted through opponents' lines for 977 yards in 197 on third best in the NFC, and vests Johnny Roland andCid Edwards added 392 and 350, respectively.

If the Cardinals are bereft of a top-echelon quarterback, Hollway has shown no dismay. Jim Hart and Pete Beathard are neck-and-neck for the starting job. "Either can do the job, but it won't be both," Hollway says.

Bigger questions marks than those posed by a mistake-rid-den offense in a 1-2 preseason record to date are those involving linebacking and an offensive line showing the wear and tear of age.

Tackles Ernie McMillan and Bob Reynolds are good but are 33 and 32 years old. Guard Irv Goode is 30, Guard Clyde Williams 30 and third-season center Wayne Mulligan, only 24, is out with a shoulder dislocation.

The Cardinals' linebacking stock sagged following the loss to Cincinnati when right linebacker Don Parish, the club's top rookie in 1970, was sheleved with a knee injury.

Russell Leads Way In Softball Finals

Tom Russell isn't only a good pitcher. He's bound to be a good luck charm. At least that's the way it seems after the big righthander played a key role in heading Saveway Scott City from the losers bracket of the fast pitch softball tournament to the championship Saturday night.

Russell pitched 18 innings and won Saveway's last three games in the Tournament Thursday and Saturday, beating Presley Travel Trailer Saturday night, 201, for the title.

He worked two innings for the win, striking out four of six batters. Thursday the curveballing artist pitched 16 innings, nine to beat City Light and Water and seven to hand Presley its first tournament defeat to move into the title bout.

Charlie Menz blasted a triple with two out to drive home Jack Smith in the top of the 13th inning Saturday for the decisive run. Presley took a 1-0 lead in the first and Saveway tied it in the second.

Steve Cotney and Russell teamed to check Presley on three hits Saturday. Cotney fanned 10 batters while Russell sent four to the dugout carrying their bats.

Mike O O'Brein paced Scott City's seven-hit attack off Bob Blair, the tourney's only no-hit pitcher, with three safeties in five trips to the plate.

The Malden Green Wave, runners-up in the AA state football playoffs in 1969, were unanimous choices to win the coveted southern division title by five coaches responding to a Daily Standard poll at the beginning of drills Aug. 15.

Coach Jack Phillips' crew, who have carried the league honors three straight years, finished the 1970 campaign with a share of the league honors with Dexter and had a 7-2-0 overall mark, losing to Piggott, Ark. and Dexter.

Coaches in the other divisions (northern and Bootheel), weren't unanimous, but put confidence in Poplar Bluff in the north and Illmo-Scott City in the Bootheel. Five coaches responded from the north while three returned ballots from the south.

Cape Girardeau Central, defending northern champ, was the coaches pick to pressure the Mules for the highly taunted honors. The Bengals polled four second place votes along with one compared to four firsts for Bluff and a Third.

Gideon was a close second in the Bootheel balloting while South Pemiscot drew a first place vote with I-SC picking up the other top votes from the league mentors responding.

Southern division coaches picked a big four-way race for second. Only five points separated the second, third, fourth and fifth place teams. Portageville drew the nod by one point over Caruthersville with Dexter and East Prairie running a close fourth and fifth, followed by Hayti and Chaffee in a close battle for the cellar.

Balloting was close in the northern division for the third to seventh places. Coaches picked Bluff and Cape to battle it out for the league honors with the pairs Oct. 15 battle to decide the champ.

Perryville and Sikeston were rated third and fourth with only one vote separating the pair. Jackson, Charleston and Kennett were selected to round out the league standings. Cape got only one first place nod while Bluff picked up the remaining four.

Lolich Equals Blues Record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I'm 31 and he's 22," Mickey Lolich commented.

Actually, they're both 23 and 24—Lolich of the Detroit Tigers, and Vida Blue of the Oakland A's have won 23 games apiece and gone the route 24 times, tops in the American League.

Lolich joined Blue Monday, mastering the Washington Senators with a six-hitter for a 3-0 victory—but he may have to resume his pursuit of the A's 22year-old left-hander, scheduled to take the mound tonight against California.

"Because of his popularity," Lolich said of Blue, "he's bound to win all the awards. You can't give the Most Valuable Player Award to one pitcher and give the Cy Young Award (for the best pitcher) to another. You just can't do it."

Lolich's second-place Tigers picked up half a game to move within 9½ of pennant-bound Baltimore in the American League East as the Orioles split a Labor Day doubleheader with Cleveland, winning 10-5 before the Indians won the nightcap 1-0.

In other AL action, the California Angeles beat the A's 4-2 and, in three more holidaytwinbills, the New York Yankees swept Boston 5-3 and 3-0, the Chicago White Sox defeated Minnesota 6-3 then lost to the Twins 10-3 and Kansas City swept a pair from Milwaukee, 4-3 and 6-4.

"I don't know how many hitters in this league he can get out with his fast ball," Lolich, who mixes his pitches up well, said of Oakland's flamethrowing southpaw.

"I don't have the great fast ball that he has. I have to pitch more. I have to work harder ... I've pitched so much this year, I'll take anything that comes along. I'm not even pitching one inning at a time. I'm pitching one hitter at a time."

He breezed past the Senators while the Tigers gave him the only run he needed in the first inning on Aurelio Rodriguez' triple and Gates Brown's grounder.

Lolich, cruising to his fourth complete game and second in a row, brought home Detroit's second run with a fifth-inning squeeze bunt and the Tigers wrapped it up in the ninth on Bill Freehan's double and Mickey Stanley's triple.

Boog Powell's fourth career grand slam home run highlighted Baltimore's five-run eighth inning in the opener and Andy Etchebarren and Curt Motton added round-trippers, offsetting homers by Cleveland's Ray Fosse and Chris Chambliss.

But Fred Stanley's run-scoring single in the fourth inning of the nightcap was all the Tribe needed as Vince Colbert and Steve Dunning teamed to silence the Orioles on seven hits.

Ron Swoboda won the Yankees' opener with a two-run pinch single in the eighth inning, then saved it with a spectacular catch in the ninth as he crashed into the right field stands to rob Reggie Smith of a game-tying homer.

They made it a sweep as Horace Clarke snapped a scoreless tie in the eighth with a two-run triple off Red Sox rookie John Curtis.

Leaders Hold 7-Game Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Pittsburgh Pirates are better off than they were one year ago and the Los Angeles Dodgers are better off than they were one day ago.

As a result of Labor Day activity in the National League, the Pirates hold a seven-game lead in the East Division while the Dodgers trail San Francisco by the same aount in the West.

Pittsburgh swept a doubleheader from the Chicago Cubs 4-1 and 10-5 while Los Angeles trimmed San Francisco 52.

Elsewhere, St. Louis split with Philadelphia, winning 6-3 and losing 2-1; the New York Mets trounced Montreal 7-0, Houston beat Atlanta 6-4 and Cincinnati nipped San Diego 10.

In the American League, Baltimore defeated Cleveland 10-5 before losing 1-0, Detroit blanked Washington 3-0, the New York Yankees took two from Boston 5-3 and 3-0, California topped Oakland 4-2, the Chicago White Sox downed Minnesota 6-3 but dropped the nightcap 10-3 and Kansas City swept Milwaukee 4-3 and 6-4.

Nelson Briles checked the Cubs on three in Pittsburgh's opener, the first complete game by a Pirate hurler in 16 starts, and hot-hitting Rennie Stennett set up two runs with a double and triple.

Gene Alley, Stennett and Clines singled in the third inning of the nightcap, tying the score 2-2, and Roberto Clemente was purposely passed so southpaw Ken Holtzman could face left-swinging Willie Stargell.

Stargell ruined that strategy with his 44th home run of the season and second grand slam. Al Oliver hit a two-run homer in the seventh while Joe Pepitone connected for the skidding Cubs, who dropped into fourth place 12 games back.

A year ago, the Bucs had a two-game lead and went on to win the division by five.

Ron Stone's sixth-inning sacrifice fly gave the Phillies their second game triumph over the Cards after the Redbirds took the opener behind Bob Gibson on the strength of a six-run outburst in the third inning, capped by Joe Hague's three-run homer.

But the big news was a fourth-inning fight in the first game between Philadelphia catcher Tim McCarver and St. Louis outfielder Lou Brock, former teammates on the Cards.

The hard feelings apparently began an inning earlier when McCarver dropped a pop foul in front of the St. Louis dugout and took some needling, which he thought came from Brock.

Brock insisted he didn't get on McCarver, but when he came to bat in the fourth the outfielder had to jump away from two inside pitches from rookie reliever Manny Muniz.

Brock started for the mound—but McCarver intercepted him, saying, "He's only a kid." "Well," answered Brock, "if it happens again I'll fight you."

"I don't go for these talkingshoving matches," explained McCarver, who punched Brock twice before the umpires pulled him away and was ejected from the game for his trouble.

Afterwards, both parties were willing to forgive and forget.

Broyles Leads Fisk To Finals

DUDLEY — Larry Broyles laced a two out single in the ninth, driving in two runs to break up a 1-1 deadlock and send Fisk into the finals of the Southeast Missouri Men's Independent League baseball tournament Sunday afternoon with a 3-1 verdict over Parma.

Steve Coulson, former Three Rivers junior college ace pitcher, picked up the win allowing four hits and striking out 12, sending eight out of the last 12 batters he faced to the bench with strikeouts.

Fisk scored an unearned run in the first inning and got only two hits through the first eight frames before bunching two singles with two outs and an error to score two runs off Mike Dambach.

Dambach, former prep standout at Lilbourn who now plays at Southeast Missouri State, scored Parma's only run. The speedy righthander sped home with two out in the seventh when a baserunner was caught in a rundown between first and second.

Pat McClarty, all state high school centerfielder from Lilbourn, ripped two doubles off Coulson, who led his team's hitting with two singles.

PRO CHARTS

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

American Conference: Eastern Division

4—NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

PROSPECTUS—Back Bay shuffle has really dredged up something—new name, new coach, new stadium, new general manager, new quarterback. But a lot of the old player personnel problems. Mainly, not enough class bodies to fill all the slots. With lousiest record in pro ball, Patriots haven't been exuberantly successful in dispelling losing image. They've lost at least 10 games a season since '66. They'll still lose.

Offense

PASSING — Era of Jim Plunkett about to begin, Joe Kapp willing. Pats have cornered market on QBs of Mexican descent. Actually, Plunkett can't miss. Contract hassle could eliminate Kapp, who throws knuckleballs but breathes fire. Rating—B.

RUNNING — Suspicion that Bo Nance, all wobbly 250 pounds of him, may have had it. Carl Garrett's kind of runner coveted by other teams, but life with Patriots hasn't been mutually compatible so far. Potentially, these guys could do it, but don't hold your breath. Young Odell Lawson will see lots of action.—Rating—B—.

RECEIVING — Start with Ron Sellers, who hasn't performed up to his potential for two years, and stop right there. There's been some question about Sellers catching in crowd, but he's really topflight material. But Pats desperately need another wide receiver, and there's no bonafide tight end around either, with Tom Beer switched to guard. Rating—C—.

LINE — Couple of years ago Pats thought they had topflight unit. Good center in Jon Morris, rugged guards in Mike Montler, Len St. Jean, adequate tackles. But last year their protection broke down. Or maybe it was their morale under the operating conditions. At any rate, one of Coach Johnny Mazur's big jobs is to spark them back up. Rating—C+.

Defense

LINE—Until Phil Olsen defected (club ridiculously neglected to pick up his option), Pats were chortling. They're still not in too bad shape if they can wheedle just one more season out of chunky tackle vets Houston Antwine, Earthquake Hunt, Ike Lassiter, decked last year with bad knee, could flash back to old Oakland Raider form. Ron Berger has size to deliver pass rush at end. And there are big hopes for draftee Julius Adams, a tackle. Rating—B—.

LINEBACKING—In a state of flux. Lot of candidates, no sure things, not even logical starter Jim Cheyunski in middle, who had knee operation. Best of crew in '70 was Bull Bramlett, team MVP. He's a red hot emotionally, but not among league's premier performers. Couple of Notre Damers, Bobo Olson and Tim Kelly, have chance to help. Rating—C.

SECONDARY — Not bad. Maybe best part of team. Daryl Johnson at one corner is all-star stuff; other corner Don Webb still looks healthy enough, in 11th year. Larry Carwell had good year at safety, and soph Clarence Scott hits hard. Also have Art McMahon and Dick Farley (ex-Charger) to push them. Rating—B.

KICKING—Can Gino Cappelletti kick 'em up one more year? Can Charlie Gogolak get more trajectory? Can Tommy Janik get punts up to 40-per? Don't ask. Rating—C.

Chess-It's No Mere Game

By Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON – Bobby Fischer of the United States is scheduled to face Tigran Petrosian of the Soviet Union in the semifinals of the world chess challengers tournament beginning between Sept. 12 and 15 at a site still to be announced, possibly Yugoslavia. The winner will challenge world champion Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union for the world title in March 1972.

George Bernard Shaw called chess "a foolish expedient for making idle people believe they are doing something very clever, when they are only wasting their time." That may still be the majority opinion. But there are those like French artist Marcel Duchamp who see the subliminal attraction of the royal game.

"In chess," he says, "there are some extremely beautiful things in the domain of movement, but not in the visual domain. It's the imagining of the movement or of the gesture that makes the beauty ... It.s completely in one's gray matter."

Even Duchamp concedes that the milieu of chess players is a bit rarified. "These people are completely cloudy, completely blind, wearing blinkers – madmen of a certain quality, the way the artist is supposed to be, and isn't, in general." He might have had Bobby Fischer of Brooklyn, N.Y., in mind.

Fischer at age 28 no longer can qualify as the enfant terrible of bigtime chess. After 14 years in competition, his temper is under tighter control, although his life style remains appropriately bizarre. Fischer lives out of a succession of hotel rooms; goes to bed at 5 a.m. and gets up at 3 p.m.; complains unduly about noise; dines at the Automat on watermelon and tomato juice; dresses in a style that has been described as "late Goodwill"; and thinks about little but chess.

In pursuit of the world championship that has been a Soviet monopoly since 1948, Fischer has won his last 19 games in matches against grandmasters. Chess experts groping for a parallel to make Fischer's feat intelligible to nonplayers speak of hitting 19 home runs in 19 at-bats. Sports Illustrated notes that the analogy is inexact because as a rule "more top - level chess games are drawn than are won or lost. A hard - pressed grandmaster can usually force a draw."

Not against the high - school dropout. In a typical demonstration, Fischer on Aug. 9 demolished 11 grandmasters and masters in a rapid - fire tournament at the Manhattan Chess Club where Fischer started playing at age 10. One of his victims commented: "You know you're going to lose. Even when I was ahead I had a feeling."

The upcoming match with Petrosian is seen as a crucial test of Fischer's stamina and patience. The Guardian Weekly warns that Petrosian "has a reputation for negative waiting play" and might settle for winning the first game and then trying to close up the match with half - points obtained through draws.

In his typical aggressive style, Fischer already has created a controversy by charging that the Russians "have no sense of sportsmanship," and that they find ways to take advice from their seconds or arrange the schedule against their opponents. The upcoming Petrosian - Fischer match is reported to be the talk of Moscow, but it has attracted little attention in the United States.

Fischer's explanation for the comparative unpopularity of chess in America is hardly flattering. "people don't want to concentrate. It's too painful." To devotees like Fischer, chess may be a science and a sport but it's no mere game.

Interstate 55, a dance band from Memphis, will perform Friday at 9 p.m. at the Portagevill Armory at the National Soybean Festival. The group will be presented by the Portageville Jaycees.

Camping Areas Will Be Closed

JEFFERSON CITY — Camping areas worn out by long and heavy usage will be closed Jan. 1, 1972, according to the Director of Missouri State Parks, Joseph Jaeger, Jr.

Areas in Bennett Spring State Park near Lebanon, Montauk State Park near Salem, and Roaring River State Park near Cassville, will be closed for rest, redesign, and restoration.

Jaeger noted, "Heavy use has destroyed the ground cover in certainly heavy use areas causing erosion and loss of topsoil. The resulting soil compaction is contributing to the early death of trees. We must close these areas in order to fulfill our responsibility of preservation and maintain a balanced ecological system."

The specific areas effected are the campground on the northeast side of the stream behind the dining lodge at Bennett Spring State Park; the upper campground at Montauk State Park on the west side of the stream; and campgrounds two and six at Roaring River State Park which are across from the dining lodge and a small area near the cabins.

Jaeger added that these three parks were among the first acquired, Bennett Spring in 1924, Montauk in 1926, and Roaring River in 1928. He pointed out, "Land, just like a carpet, wears out if too many people walk, camp or drive across it too often. This land must be rested to restore it to usefulness."

OVERCROWDING in state park campgrounds has destroyed ground cover causing erosion and loss of topsoil. Resulting soil compaction contributes to the early death of trees. Some of the most seriously affected areas will be closed for restoration, according to Joseph Jaeger, Jr., Director of parks.

Lilbourn Scouts Complete Projects

LILBOURN — Most of the scouts of Troop 50 have been very active during the summer. From June 20 to 26 the scouts, accompanied by their scoutmaster, attended Camp Lewallen, where they participated in the various camping activities and earned a number of merit badges. All reported having a good time and had words of praise for the camp staff members. Assistant scoutmaster, Mike Smith, was a member of the summer camp staff. A number of parents from Lilbourn visited camp and witnessed the Order of Arrow call - out ceremony. Troop committee chairman Bill Jones, and scouts Jeff Stark, Lonnie Ponder, Billy Rodman and Charles "Chuckie" Johnson were among those called out. They returned to Camp Lewallen on August 13-15 where they completed the OA ordeal ceremonies.

After returning from camp most of the scouts have continued to work on advancements and merit badges, having earned a total of 55 merit badges since the last court of honor. The next court of honor will be held early in October.

Three boys of the troop are nearing the Eagle rank. In addition to earning 21 merit badges for the Eagle rank, a scout must carry out a service project helpful to the school, church or community. Brad Jones, Mitchell Allen and Billy Rodman selected to tidy up the City Park for their project. Each boy devoted more than 10 hours to removing grass and weeds from the sidewalk. A number of people stopped to kid the scouts and asked why they were having to work out a city fine. The project completed and the scouts think you will agree by observing the before and after pictures that the sidewalk does look better.

As a Life Scout project, Lonnie Ponder and Jeff Stark selected to re-do the floor of the City Hall where the weekly meetings of the Kiwanis Club are held. They devoted several hours to cleaning and painting the floor. The CIC ladies and the Kiwanis members are glad that the boys selected this project.

Scouting is on the upward trail in Lilbourn, but den mothers are needed for a cub pack. The Kiwanis Club sponsors of the scouting programs in Lilbourn. Anyone interested in helping with a cub pack should see Bill Jones, committee chairman or L. D. Fish, member of committee.

Section Of School Grounds To Be Sold

CHARLESTON — CHARLESTON — The R-1 Board of Education held its August meeting Thursday night and authorized president Ralph Adkisson to sign papers selling about one-half acre of the Lincoln School grounds to the Charleston urban renewal authority.

The sale is made subject to an opinion by the board attorney as to legality of the transfer.

The board accepted the resignations of Mrs. Elna Ruth Cook and Miss Marsha McKeldin from the faculty. Mrs. Cook taught music in the elementary grades, and Miss McKeldin was an English teacher at CHS.

A leave of absence was granted to Louis Hunley III, a teacher at the A. D. Simpson School, who is returning to school for additional training.

Bids on bus insurance were opened, and the contract was awarded to Cliff Morris, State Farm Agent at Sikeston.

The board also voted to pay for major medical insurance coverage for all members of the faculty. The group policy is purchased through the Missouri State Teachers Association.

Teachers will continue to pay for coverage for dependents, if desired.

Sikeston, Missouri 63801

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I am writing in regard to the recent articles in your newspaper concerning the labor management discussions. What kind of Chamber of Commerce do we have that would fight economic prosperity? Do the people of Sikeston realize why the Chamber and the City fathers are against organized labor?

The people of the Chamber, the city government, and the big businessmen are all against labor for the simple reason that they want to keep the little man little and the big man big. By this I mean that they want to keep the working man's wages down so they can reap a larger monetary reward. Don't they know or do they care, that better wages for the blue collar workers will mean added prosperity for everyone in the area?

There is an old axiom that these people seem to want to live by, "The rich get richer and the poor get poorer." Have they asked themselves why Sikeston does not have as high per capita income as do our northern cities and towns where the blue collar workers are for the most part members of labor unions. These same businessmen would love to pay their employees wages ranging from $1.50 to $2.00 per hour, and yet keep raising their prices, without raising wages.

We hear a lot about organized labor being a big factor in causing inflation. Isn't it strange that the cost of living in Sikeston is higher than that of many places where the work mostly organized. If you doubt this ask anyone from St. Louis about the prices in the stores, here as compared to there.

I have lived in several places across the county and this area has the highest cost of living yet. Do they blame this on organized labor too.

The other day I heard a Sikeston businessman remark that no man is worth $4.00 per hour, yet I am sure his salary would be in the 40 to 50 thousand dollar bracket. How can a man with a family have a decent standard of living on $60 to $90 per week? The same businessmen that bitch about the Noranda project have made thousands of dollars from the union people working there. How many thousands of union dollars have been spent in Sikeston for housing food, clothes, entertainment etc? Their attitude toward organized labor looks like they are biting the hand that feeds them.

To set the record straight, you inferred that the various cities such as Sikeston, Poplar Bluff and Cape decided to have these labor management meetings. That is false. The idea was conceived byDick Floatron, business agent for the Electricians union. He wanted to discuss the various problems with the Chambers and to reach some kind of rappor. Isn't it strange that Clem Beal, acting for the Chamber, was criticized for going to the discussion? How does the Chamber expect to improve conditions if they "bury their heads in the sand" and won't even try to hear the other side of the story?

The objectives of the discussions as stated by the Sikeston Chamber are "to aid their grievances to members of organized labor and is designed only to erase a bad image of organized labor in Southeast Missouri. Now I ask you does the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce sound open minded to anything?

Dear Mr. Blanton:

Enclosed please find two letters that speak for themsleves. This is the second time Mr. Symington's office has shown with what inefficiency it operates. it reminds me of a poem I read somewhere recently:

Dear Senator:

I see where another guaranteed annual income plan has been passed by the House in a vote of 288 to 132 and is on its way to the Senate.

I still believe enactment of this legislation would invite more economic disaster for this nation. In our state the number of people on welfare rolls would be increased to 443,100!

I hope you will do everything in your power to oppose this legislation.

Very Truly yours,
Mrs. Harry Bock

Dear Mrs. Bock:

Acknowlegding your recent letter, we understand your disappointment over action taken by the State government to reduce the assistance you receive from the Missouri Division of Welfare because of the recent increase in Social Security benefits.

Legislation has been introduced to prohibit such action from being taken in the future. This bill, S. 858, is currently pending before the Senate Finance Committee which has been advised of the interest many Missourians have expressed in legislation for this purpose.

I appreciate receiving your comments, and share your concern over the difficulties of those who are trying to live on fixed income in these inflationary times. Be assured we will follow the progress of S. 858 with great interest and concern.

Sincerely,
Stuart Symington.

Charleston Council Okays Renewal Plan

CHARLESTON — A master plan for rebuilding nearly a fourth of the city of Charleston was approved by theCity Council at a special meeting Monday night, and the city's urban renewal plan was taken to St. Louis on Wednesday for final approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development regional office there.

The plan calls for a capital improvements grant of $4,153,222 from the federal government, a figure which is about $600,000 higher than the ''grant reservation'' announced by HUD in March.

Tanna Parish, executive director of the local urban renewal program, said the difference is due to changes in federal law relative to relocation allowances for persons displaced from their homes by urban renewal land clearance activities.

The new "replacement housing'' payments (the difference between what urban renewal pays for a condemned house and what the owner-occupant family needs to build or buy a standard home of adequate size) may be as much as $15,000. The previous limit was $5,000.

There are other relocation grants — for moving expenses, a ''dislocation allowance'', grants to present tenants for down payments on new homes, displacements for businesses, and a sort of equalization payment for a four year period which pays tenants or owners the difference between what they have to pay for standard housing and what they can afford to pay, based on a complicated formula. This can be as high as $1,000 per year.

Under the plan approved by the City Council and sent to St. Louis Tuesday, some 218 families and 132 individuals would be displaced from their present homes. In addition, 38 commercial and nine industrial firms would be displaced, as would one church.

Most of these families, individuals and institutions would qualify for some sort of relocation grants. A total of $1,543,360 is set aside in the project budget for these grants.

The budget also calls for $2,522,362 in federal money for capital improvements. This includes purchase of existing property, relocation and paving of streets, installation of water and sewer facilities, and other expenses incurred in developing the property into suitable standard size housing lots and business sites.

The actual cost of these improvements is considerably higher than the amount budgeted, but the cost is somewhat offset by the resale of property after it is cleared, for redevelopment by private owners.

An $87,500 amount in the budget is set a side to be paid to owner-occupants of existing property which can be rehabilitated and brought up to housing code standards. The maximum grant possible under this section of the budget is $3,500.

The planning phase of the local urban renewal program has been completed in near-record time, according to Ron Denton, a representative of R. W. Booker and Associated, St. Louis, the consulting firm which prepared the final plan for submission to HUD.

The final plan is contained in an 8½x14-inch book about four inches thick and the book is available for public inspection at the Urban Renewal Authority's temporary office in the Chamber of Commerce headquarters on East Commercial Street and at City Hall.

Approval by HUD of the final plan and actual start of urban renewal operations is expected within the next three weeks, according to Mr. Parish.

To summarize some of the major residential area changes envisioned by the urban renewal plan:

All remaining streets in the project area will be paved.

Slum dwellings east of the Lincoln School would be razed, several streets closed, and the land replatted in standard size house lots for sale to private individuals. A new Green Street, with a circular drive at one end, would be the heart of this redeveloped area. Similar redevelopment would take place in the entire area between South Elm Street and South Grand Avenue, with the area zoned for single-family occupancy.

In the downtown area of Charleston, several changes are also planned:

A large off-street parking lot will be created on the north side of West Commercial Street, from Franklin to Center Streets, and the property surrounding the lot will be cleared for sale to developers as a downtown ''shopping center.''

A smaller off-street parking lot will be created on the north side of East Cypress Street between Main and First Streets, and seven blocks of side streets in the downtown area will be closed to through traffic and converted into diagonal parking zones, as shown on the map.

A pedestrian mall will be created on the north side of East Cypress Street between Main and First Streets, and seven blocks of side streets in the downtown area will be closed to through traffic and converted into diagonal parking zones.

A pedestrial mall will be created from Main Street to the off-street parking lot by the elimination of several buildings on the west side of North Main Street, with room in the mall for a small park with trees, benches and possibly a fountain.

Parish said Tuesday that all matters relating to the urban renewal project, with the exception of appraisal figures on the property, are now a matter of public record, since the City Council adopted a resolution giving the plan the force of law in the urban renewal project area. No building permits will be issued in the project area unless the proposed construction conforms to land use provisions of the council approved plan.

Bond Issue May Be Resubmitted

CARUTHERSIVLLE — A petition is being circulated in Caruthersville in an effort to re-submit a recreation bond issue, defeated at the polls Tuesday, to the voters again for reconsideration.

A spokesman at the Caruthersville city hall said a call was received in the office of the city clerk, inquiring about the technical wording of a petition.

Five-hundred names of registered city voters are sought on the petition, which requests the issue be brought before the voters again. Tuesday, a majority approved the $60,000 issue, which would be the city's share of $500,000 in federal monies for a swimming pool and recreation center, however, the majority given the issue was not a two-thirds majority, required for its passage.

The bond measure would raise the city tax rate to its former $2.10 valuation, since the city recently lowered the rax rate from $2.10 to $2. The vote Tuesday was 461 for and 378 against. The bond would pave the way for funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development for a community center complex and the county's only public swimming pool.

Way Cleared For 80 New Apartments

CHARLESTON -- The City Council conducted a public hearing Monday night on the proposed Urban Renewal plan, and adopted a resolution giving the plan the force of law in the project area.

In other action Monday night, the Council approved the rezoning of a portion of the S & S Subdivision and the Howlett property north of the new Charleston R-1 High School from R-1 to R-2.

The zoning change, which would permit the constructinon of apartment houses in the area, had already been approved by the city Planning and Zoning Commission. It was made at the request of a Memphis Firm AMCON Inc., which proposes to build 50 units of apartment housing for moderate - income families on the Howlett property, and 30 units on the S & S property.

The council also heard a report on two other housing projects planned for Charleston. One, to be built by the Housing Authority, would consist of 100 units for the elderly, and would be built on a site in the urban renewal project area north of Marshall Street with South Locust Street running down the center.

The other proposal is for 100 units of housing to be built by private capital and leased to the housing authority. Details of this plan are not yet available.

City Manager Dick Martin said approval and construction of the two projects, plus the AMCON housing, would give Charleston over 380 new housing units within the near future. This figure includes the 110 units of low - income housing and housing for the elderly now under construction by the Housing Authority.

The Council overruled the Planning and Zoning Commission on two proposals. One would have rezoned the Marshall Reeves property on South Main Street (south of the Mississippi County Savings and Loan Association Building) from R-1 to B-1.

The other proposal would have changed zoning on W. H.Winchester property on South Main Street south of the R-1 administration building from R-1 to B-1. The change was sought to permit the Shelby Funeral home to construct a new funeral chapel. Council sources said it is likely a "special use" zoning change will be adopted, to permit use of the property for a funeral home, but that a blanket approval for general business use would not be given.

Amendment Route Rated Better Revision Method

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The director of the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey has told a joint legislative committee that the amendment process is a more practical method of revising the state constitution than a constitutional convention.

"We find that the need for a constitutional convention does not exist in Missouri at this time," Edward Staples said at a joint hearing of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee and House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

"We encounter no proposed revisions which cannot be adequately dealt with by amendment," Staples said.

The MPES executive director said that the subject matter of the 1945 Missouri constitution is arranged so revisions can be incorporated by amendment in a logical manner. He said that when the convention route is taken, a constitution can be defeated by one or two provisions unpopular with voters.

Staples said that the state constitution requires a vote each 20 years on the question of a constitutional convention, and in 1962 Missouri voters rejected a convention by a vote of 519,499 to 295,972.

Staples also noted that the cost of a constitutional convention has been estimated at $2.3 million by the state budget office. The convention that drafted the present constitution cost the taxpayers about $1 million, he said.

Overnight Delivery By Oct. 31 Postal Goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service says it will try to guarantee within two months overnight delivery of nearly all local first class mail deposited by 5 p.m.

"The goal is next-day delivery of letters and other first class mail within cities and surrounding areas," said Postmaster General Winton M. Blount.

Regional and local officials will announce by Sept. 9 the exact areas in which overnight delivery of zip coded first class mail can be provided, Blount said.

By Oct. 31, 95 per cent of first class mail deposited within an area should be receiving next day delivery, he said.

The Postal Service said mail must be zip coded to receive such treatment, and must be deposited in collection boxes or post offices.

PROGRESS IN BERLIN
SETBACK IN VIETNAM

BERLIN

For a quarter of a century the four occupying powers in Berlin – the United States, Soviet Union, Great Britain, and France – have had on - again, off- again discussions of "The Berlin Issue."

It all began when World War II hostilities ended and the four powers split up the historic German capital city located 110 miles within Communist East Germany into four sectors.

Post -war Berlin has had a tumultous and at times sad history, including the Berlin blockade of 1948-1949 and the Berlin wall erected in 1961.

Now the four powers have reached an accord on at least some of the Berlin problems. The terms of the accord are still secret pending their approval in the respective capitals. They are purported to provide for unimpeded traffic across travel access routes into Berlin, permitting visits by West Berliners to East Berlin and East Germany, and other matters.

The Berlin wall is not coming down, but the stark confrontation symbolized by that wall has been moderated.

SOUTH VIETNAM ELECTIONS

Time and again both President Johnson and President Nixon have stated one of America's principal purposes for fighting in Vietnam as "The right of all the South Vietnamese people to determine for themselves the kind of government they want."

The October Presidential elections in Vietnam were to be eloquent and dramatic proof of the vitality of that principal. The crowning event of Ambassador Bunker's tour of duty in South Vietnam was to have been a spirited, hotly - contested American - style election with President Thieu emerging victorious as the popular choice of the people.

All of that is over now. First Thieu, hammered out a restrictive election law limiting his opposition to one or two possible candidates; and now those possible candidates, General Big Minh and Vice President Ky, refuse to play out the election charade. Self - determination in Vietnam means the determination of the clique in power to stay in power.

In April, when I visited Vietnam, I wrote the following on the Vietnamese elections:

"Some American interests would like Big Minh to run and may even help financially. They recognize that Thieu will win regardless, but would like to enhance his victory by having him triumph in a 'credible and competitive' election.

"The whole notion of Vietnamese elections has always troubled me. It is we, the United States, who are hung up about elections in Vietnam. We decided that this war - ravaged, backward country with no historical or current experience in the democratic process must be shaped in our image. Since we elect a President, so too must Vietnam, ready or not.

"It salves our conscience. To some it gives surface credence to the argument that 'we are fighting for freedom in South Vietnam.'"

What the last several months of political intrigue by President Thieu shows is that our seventeen years of sacrifice to "give the South Vietnamese a chance to determine their own future" has been manipulated by President Thieu to insure his own political future.

So yet another rationale for our continued presence in Vietnam has been discarded in the wastecan with such past excuses as the "domino theory" and the "need to contain Communist China."

DANFORTH REFUSES TEST CASE ON REVENUE DEPARTMENT AUDIT

JEFFERSON CITY – A dispute over whether the state Department of Revenue can deny the auditor's office access to tax returns has Revenue Director James E. Schaffner backed into a corner. He now must, against his wishes, allow state auditors access to individual, sales and intangible tax returns or face possible legal action.

The controversy began in July when Schaffner refused to make certain tax returns available to state auditors. Under the Missouri Constitution, the State Auditor's office is required to audit all state agencies at least annually. Schaffner cited a law requiring tax returns to be kept confidential.

On July 23, State Auditor Christopher (Kit) Bond requested an official opinion from Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth on the legality of Schaffner's action. In his request, Bond said it was necessary for his office to have access to individual returns on a "sample basis" to effectively audit the revenue department. Danforth's opinion, released Aug. 18, said Bond's office did, in fact, have the authority to view these returns during an audit.

Schaffner disagreed with the opinion "both in theory and because of the laws'which describe his duties and responsibilities. Here requested that Danforth initiate a declaratory judgment action, a test case on the opinion. On Aug. 27, Danforth wrote Schaffner that no test case would be filed.

Danforth also warned Schaffner to abide by the decision. "Should you elect to disregard the opinion of this office," Danforth wrote, "and thwart the auditor in the performance of his constitutional duties, you should be prepared to assume personally the legal consequences of your action."

Schaffner contends that Missouri taxpayers have a right to expect their tax returns to be kept private and confidential. "It is a sacred tradition of our American system of government that individual tax returns should not be seen by anyone except those few government employes directly charged with the responsibility of processing and verifying the accuracy of the returns," Schaffner wrote when requesting a test case. "I believe in this right of privacy for Missouri taxpayers and believe their rights must be defended."

Schaffner acknowledges the auditor's duty to audit the revenue department's financial records, but says it can be done without access to tax returns. "It is not necessary for the auditor to have access to confidential tax returns in performing his duties, any more than he would need access to private medical records of individuals if he were auditing a doctor's office."

Danforth disagrees. Tax returns are filed with the revenue department by law, he says, and represent the taxpayers' determination of what they owe the state. "As such, they show amounts which the department is obliged to collect and are proper for inspection by an auditor."

Although Danforth recognizes the requirement that tax returns be kept from unauthorized disclosure, he does not feel the taxpayers' privacy will be violated if state auditors see the returns. "Confidentiality is not an issue here," he wrote Schaffner when refusing to authorize the test case. "No reason exists to believe that the State Auditor in the performance of his constitutional duties is any more likely to divulge information in tax returns than you in the exercise of your duties."

The essense of Danforth's opinion is that the state's laws prohibiting the disclosure of the contents of tax returns do not apply to the State Auditor, who is granted very broad powers by the Missouri Constitution. Danforth also emphasizes that examiners appointed to audit the state's agencies are prohibited from disclosing any of the information they obtain in their inspections to anyone except the State Auditor.

Although the dispute has focused on legal questions, it probably is based on partisan politics. The revenue department, staffed through the political patronage system, is controlled by the Democrats. Both Danforth and Bond are Republicans, and Bond has attacked the department several times since he took office.

The correspondence between Danforth and Schaffner also indicates the political nature of the argument. For example, when refusing Schaffner's requested test case, Danforth wrote: "If the Department of Revenue is properly performing its duties, I would think you (Schaffner) would welcome verification of this fact by the State Auditor."

Schaffner has been put in a difficult position. He can abide by Danforth's opinion and release tax returns to Bond's auditors, a victory for Bond and Danforth. Or, he can refuse to disclose this information and face the legal action Danforth has promised. The action would not, however, be a "test" case.

Scott City Park Project Proposed

SCOTT CITY — Mayor Cliff Campbell reported that pre-application information for the Scott City park improvement project, a swimming pool and recreation development, has been filed with the State Inter-Agency Council for Outdoor Recreation (BOR).

George E. Butler & Associates, Inc., consulting engineers filled put two applications for the project. One application covers acquisition of property for the project and the second application covers development of the project. This was done in two steps as it is felt that separate priorities will be assigned to the project. It may be that the property acquisition will proceed immediately while approval of the development application may require more time.

Mayor Campbell stated that Butler & Associates are proceeding with developments of the preliminary drawings and cost estimates for the Scott City project and may be completed with them in a few weeks. Mayor Campbell stated that upon completion of the drawings, Mr. Butler will review the project with him and members of the Scott City Park Board. At that time various alternates may be reviewed for consideration and selection of a plan for final development of the project could then be finalized in a report form suitable for filing with the Federal applications and providing necessary information to support a bond election campaign.

Armed Forces

His wife, Wilda, is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth McLain of Advance.

DENVER — Airman Marvin L. Hale, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvin A. Hale of star route, Wappapello, Mo., has graduated at Lowry Air Force Base, from the air force munitions maintenance specialist course.

Stiffer Rules For Inspection Of Meat

JEFFERSON CITY – The U. S. Department of Agriculture notified the Missouri department of agriculture that stiffer rules were being added to the state meat inspection program and reported a U.S.D.A. intent to take over the state program in 30 days if Missouri was not able to make the necessary corrections.

According to animal health officials of the state Department of agriculture, the corrections were minor ones and work was started immediately on a check of Missouri meat plants.

As of Aug. 31, a total of 82 plants had been ordered closed since the initial federal order was issued. Thirty - six of those 82 plants have been reinspected and reopened. Animal Health officials also indicate that within the next four or five days the number of plants reopened will show a marked increase.

In many instances plants were not closed but only held up in their operations since the minor infractions were corrected on the sopt. For the most part, the Missouri infractions have been lack of water samples and a sewage acceptance letter, plus a lack of denaturant and other sanitation problems.

A wholesome meat act passed by Congress in 1967 requires all states to have a meat inspection program equal to the federal program. Missouri was awarded an "equal -to" status one year ago but, during the intervening period, changes in regulation and review dispositions have been made that brought about the recent Missouri inspection problem.

The Missouri department of agriculture reports that its animal health division is putting forth a 100 per cent effort to correct this most recent problem and officials feel assured that all the federal regulations will be met within the allotted 30 day period. Consumers can be certain that no adulterated meat has been or will be sold to the public.

Prisoner Flees Hospital Room

POPLAR BLUFF — William Eugene Caudel, 19, of the 900 block of Butler, Poplar Bluff, a Stoddard County prisoner being treated at Doctors Hospital, escaped from the hospital Tuesday afternoon, the Sheriff's Office said.

The Sheriff's office said that Caudel escaped when a guard, a Stoddard County deputy, was called to the telephone by a woman caller who wanted to know the visiting days at the Stoddard County jail.

Caudel was described as 6 - feet tall, 180 pounds, ruddy complexion blue eyes, red hair and was wearing a shite shirt and black pants.

Sheriff Clyde Hendrix said Caudel was taken to the hospital after receiving a stab wound Friday at the Butler County jail. The sheriff said he believed the small stab wound in the abdomen was self - inflicted.

Caudel was being held in the Stoddard County jail on a Check forgery charge until he was brought to the Butler County jail for safekeeping, the Sheriff's Office said.

Stoddard County authorities discovered Thursday morning that two bars had been sawed from the window of the Stoddard County jail.

Sheriff Hendrix said four felony charges had been filed against Caudel in Butler County.

Jail Key Thief Cleared

BY JACK strauss, LL.B.

Sentenced to six months in jail, Rocky quickly developed a negative reaction to being locked up and just as quickly developed a positive plan for getting out. He would start a fight with one of the prison guards, surreptiously life the guard's keys during the melee and then, when no one was looking, walk out of jail.

Unfortunatley for Rocky, however, his plan went slightly amiss. After successfully staging the phony fight, the guard immediatley missed his keys and, finding them under Rocky's mattress, charged him with robbery.

"The guy's a crook," the guard complained in court. "He stole my keys."

"Nonsense," was Rocky's answer. "I didn't steal them. I only borrowed them. He would have gotten them back."

If you were the judge, would you convict freedom-seeking Rocky of robbery?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that robbery requires the intent to permanently deprive someone of his property. And, in this case, the judge noted, it was unlikely that Rocky intended to permanently deprive the guard of his keys. They were of no use to Rocky unless he intended to stay in jail which was highly unlikely. (Based upon a 1950 Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Decision)

Amendments Favored To Change Constitution

JEFFERSON CITY — The amendment process is a more practical means of revising Missouri's constitution than a constitutional convention, Edward Staples, executive director of Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, told a joint Missouri Sentate - House Committee meeting in St. Louis today.

When the convention route is taken, he said, a constitution can be carried to defeat by one or two provisions unpopular with voters. It is not unusual, he said, for a single issue to carry a proposed constitution to defeat.

The subject matter of Missouri's constitution is arranged so that revisions, even substantial ones, can be incorporated by amendment in a logical manner, Staples said.

The Survey's director said, "We find that the need for a constitutional convention does not exist in Missouri at this time. We encounter no proposed revisions which cannot be adequately dealt with by amendment."

Missouri's constitution is easier to amend than the constitutions of most states, Staples said. Amendments can be submitted either by the legislature or by initiative. Only about a dozen states permit the initiative, and Missouri is one of 16 states allowing a simple majority of legislators to submit amendments.

The record shows, he said, that issues which at a given time seem to require a convention can be resolved without one.

Staples recalled that a study committee appointed by Governor Dalton in 1962, when the question was on the ballot, found a convention was not needed. A convention was rejected by a 519,000 to 295,000 vote. He also recalled that a minority report of the 1962 study committee listed issues it said justified a convention. They included: Permitting a governor to succeed himself, authorizing annual legislative sessions, providing additional means for St. Louis city and county to unite, and reapportioning the Missouri House.

All have been accomplished, Staples said, either by amendment or through court decision.

Staples said the minority report held that some of the revicions, since adopted, would never be submitted by the legislature. One of these was the amendment permitting a governor to succeed himself.

The minority report also said that reducing the two - thirds vote for local bond issues was a reason for a convention. Voters acted on that issue in 1967, rejecting a reduction to 60 per cent, Staples said.

The two - thirds requirement contributes to a claim that Missouri's constitution is too restrictive, Staples said. That claim also results from various limitations on tax rates and indebtedness of local governments, he said.

But, he said, it does not seem likely that a constitution omitting limitations on tax rates and indebtedness would be approved by the voters, particularly in view of voter attitude reflected in local tax elections in recent years. He recalled that a proposed amendment allowing school boards, county courts and township boards to impose higher tax rates was rejected by the voters last fall.

Some claim Missouri's constitution is too long, Staples said. But a new convention might decide, as did the last one, that lengthy portions should be kept, he said. Provisions covering budgeting and finance, highways and conservation, were retained by framers of the 1945 constitution, because they had been adopted as amendments by the voters, Staples said.

The cost of framing and adopting the present constitution was approximately a million dollars, Staples said. The present cost of a convention was placed at $2.3 million by the state budget office when a proposal for a convention was introduced in the last legislative session.

Staples noted that while a convention is in session, local and state officials, private organizations, and individual citizens throughout the state necessarily spend a great deal of time and money preparing and presenting their recommendations, and keeping themselves informed on the work of the convention and its committees. This also occurs during subsequent legislative sessions which enact implementing legislation, he said.

A convention today would require costs in terms of meeting facilities not required for the last one, Staples said. Then the legislature met biennially. The convention convened in the House Chamber and used legislators' offices. When the legislature was in session, the convention used Supreme Court facilities. This did not prove satisfactory, Staples said, so the convention provided in the constitution that legislative chambers and facilities be available to future conventions.

With annual sessions, Staples said, an added cost would be, either providing substitute meeting places and offices for legislators displaced by a convention, or possibly providing alternative arrangements, satisfactory to the convention.

The committee exploring the constitutional convention question is composed of members of the Senate Judiciary and House Constitutional Amendments committees. It is headed by Senator Maurice Schechter of Creve Coeur.

The Prayer from The Upper Room

When I sent them far away among the nations and scattered them in many lands, for a while I became their sanctuary in the countries to which they had gone. -- Ezekiel II : 16 (NEB)

PRAYER: O Lord, we thank Thee for a season of rest from daily routines. Help us to use this time to fit ourselves for renewed service, according to Thy will and for Jesus' sake. Amen.

In 1864, President Abraham Lincoln wrote a famous letter of consolation to Mrs. Lydia Bixby pertaining to the death of her five sons in the Civil War. The letter has been described as "a blending of sentiment, uplift and delicate, unaffected sympathy," The World Almanac says.

The ancient Greeks are believed to have been the first to use a combustible material, similar to gunpowder, in warfare. Called Greek fire, the highly inflammable substance was probably composed of naphtha, sulphur and crude sodium or potassium nitrate. The World Almanac says the Greeks first used it in A.D. 673 to repulse an Arab siege of Constantinople.

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tues., Sept. 7, the 250th day of 1971. There are 115 days left in the year.

On this date:

In 1533, Britain's Queen Elizabeth I was born.

In 1812, the French defeated the Russians in the Battle of Borodino southwest of Moscow.

In 1825, the French hero of the American Revolution, the Marquis De Lafayette, said his last farewells to President John Adams at the White House.

In 1930, work began on the Colorado River on Boulder Dam—now the Hoover Dam.

In 1940, German bombers began the World War II raids against London which became known as the London Blitz.

Ten years ago: President John F. Kennedy asked Congress to permit French troops in NATO to be trained in the use of nuclear weapons.

Five years ago: Communist China broke an 11-year silence on talks with the United States at ambassadorial level. Peking charged that Washington and Moscow were "singing a duet" in trying to picture a reconciliation between the United States and China.

One year ago: It was announced that U.S. troop strength in Vietnam had fallen below 400,000 for the first time since early 1967.

Two-Man Hayti Race Contested

HAYTI — Judge J. O. Swink Friday granted an injunction filed by Kennett attorneys on behalf of two Hayti men, assuring that only Mayor Harry Dowdy and ex-Mayor Lee Roy Bain will be the only candidates in a special mayor's election set Sept. 14.

Minutes after the ruling, City Attorney James (Tick) Vickery notified the judge and the attorneys he will petition the Missouri Supreme Court, asking them to prohibit Judge Swink's order.

Attorney Vickery, representing the City of Hayti which will foot the bill for the special election called for Wednesday by Judge William H. Billings after Mayor Dowdy consented to re-meet his defeated opponent, Lee Roy Bain, at the polls, has contended any eligible candidates should be allowed to file for the post, instead of restricting the election to the two men.

Bain and Dowdy were the only candidates for mayor in the April 6 election.

Vickery went before the state's highest court Tuesday on his request. If the court issues a stop order, it will open up the election to any qualified candidate.

The issue arose after Bain, who was contesting in the April election when he was defeated by Dowdy by two votes, and Dowdy appeared in court Wednesday on the contest issue. The case did not go to trial, since the two men agreed to a rematch. Judge Billings ordered the special election, basing his order on a 1945 Missouri Statute which permits another election to determine the winner if both parties agree.

The court order from Swink came after Cable and Welman jointly filed an injuction suit, requesting the court to issue an injunction against the Hayti city clerk, prohibiting him from letting anyone else but Dowdy and Bain file for the election.

New Reading Program For First Graders

HOWARDVILLE — This fall, an estimated 350 first-graders in New Madrid county R-1 schools will begin work with a major new reading program. It could help them increase their reading vocabularies by more than 5,000 words in the first 18 months, Dr. George S. Reuter, Jr., superintendent of schools, announced today.

The program, he explained, is based on a linguistic approach to reading, which allows beginning readers to discover for themselves the pattern and combination of letters that stand for the meaningful sounds of our spoken language.

Drawing on the first-graders' speaking vocabularies, which experts estimate as between 2,500 and 2,600 words, the new reading program is aimed at teaching children to read the words they already understand and use in speech, the superintendent added.

It is designed to eliminate initial reading failure and to develope independent readers from the first lesson by providing an easy transfer from the spoken to the written language.
